B.C. liquor kickbacks probed

By DEREK SIDENIUS

The RCMP today confirmed an investigation is under way into allegations of kickbacks and political payoffs involving distilleries and wineries in B.C.

Superintendent Bob Mollach, head of the RCMP's commercial crime unit in Vancouver, said the investigation is being carried out by Inspector Doug Linfield.

It began nearly three years ago and involves "virtually everyone in the industry," Mollach said.

He said the probe was originally requested by the attorney-general's ministry following confidential reports of an investigation into distillery practices in Quebec.

That investigation culminated last month in bribery charges against 26 distilleries and wineries across Canada, including Alberta Distillers of Vancouver.

The disclosure by RCMP of their investigation here follows a broadcast of CBC-TV's current affairs program The Fifth Estate Tuesday night.

The television program said practices between distillers and politicians which the Quebec crime commission described as shameless and despicable have been going on in virtually every province in Canada.

It said liquor company executives testified before the commission that for decades they had been forced to make payments to the fund raisers of the political party in power in Quebec if they wanted to do business with the Quebec liquor board.

The board has since been restructured and renamed the Quebec Liquor Corp.

Documents seized in more than 200 raids by police across the country included cancelled cheques made out by liquor companies for the provincial wings of all three major fedaeral parties.

The program said a raid on Alberta Distillers in Vancouver also showed the Social Credit party to be one of the beneficiaries.

Alberta president Charles McConville, however, said in an interview today his company has not given contributions to political parties in recent years.

Dental plan to fight 12% increase in fees

By BRENDA DALGLISH

A spokesman for the largest carrier of prepaid dental plans in B.C. said today it will fight a 12 per cent fee hike by dentists right down the line.

The fee hike was announced this week by the College of Dental Surgeons.

David Scherk, general Manager of CU & C Health Services, said the organization is seeking legal advice about charging the college under the Combines Act.

"It's obvious the provincial government does not want to take the dentists on," he said.

CU & C handles dental plans for almost every major industry in the province and covers about 400,000 B.C. residents.

Last year CU & C paid about $31 million to dentists in the province, said Scherk.

It's a non-profit society established in 1966 when the province's first dental plan began.

Scherk said CU & C has been trying without success to get the College of Dental Surgeons to negotiate a fee schedule with it.

"There's really only two people that can tackle the college. It's up to the government or us," he said.

"We kept thinking the province was going to step in but it seems apparent that they won't.

"We've had three appointments arranged with the health minister and each time they've cancelled," he claimed.

The last one, he said, was Friday when Health Minister Rafe Mair told CU & C it was "inappropriate to discuss Denticare at this time".

"We kept expecting the government to tackle this but now it appears that a deal has been made between the two (the college and the ministry) to preserve the status quo," Scherk said.

Asked why the provincial government is reluctant to consider CU & C's charges, he said: "My speculation is that they don't want to take on the dentists at this time,"

Scherk said two recent decisions, one against a bar association and one against a provincial college of physicians and surgeons, under the Combines Act have led CU & C to consider combines action.

The decision on whether to lay charges will be made within the next two or three weeks after the society's solicitor has an opportunity to do the necessary legal research.

Scherk said insurance companies actually benefit in the long-term by having medical and dental costs go up and therefore are not interested in opposing increasing rates.

"If we were interested in maximizing our own bureacracy, it would be good business for us to get dental costs up."

He said CU & C has come under pressure recently from Vancouver and District Dental Society president Dr. Egon Nikolai, who sent a letter to dentists suggesting dentists bill their patients covered by CU & C directly rather than bill CU & C.

Garry Winters, president of the Victoria and District Dental Society, confirmed today he has received a copy of Nikolai's letter but the society doesn't have a stated policy on the matter yet.

"It's an alternative if CU & C tries to push its ideas through," Winters told the Times.

Greed risks roe trade?

Negotiations for a new price for herring roe for fishermen opened today in Vancouver.

Fisheries Association of B.C. (FABC) president Jerry Spitz said today the collapse of the roe market in Japan makes it imperative that more realistic prices be paid if the industry is to survive.

And a spokesman for a major Japanese importer also said the rich roe bonanza for B.C. fishermen and processors is over because Japanese consumers have balked at an asking price of around $60 a pound.

The spokesman asked that he and his company not be identified because of the embarassing losses the company has suffered.

When the new herring roe season starts around March 5, the spokesman predicted B.C. fishermen will get only a small fraction of the $5,000 a ton paid in last year's chaotic market.

Spitz agrees.

"I think we all expected it (the collapse of the Japanese market) to happen," he said.

"The Japanese importers — they set the market and they guessed wrong."

At the negotiations which began today between the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union (UFAWU), the Native Brotherhood of British Columbia and the FABC, the fishermen were asking $3,500 a ton for gill-net-caught fish, up $2,300 a ton from last year. A price of $2,100 a ton for seine catches is being sought, an increase of $1,400.

Spitz said Japanese importers gambled last year that the affluent Japanese would pay ever-mounting

Plebiscite defeat end of Rene?

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque says if the Parti Quebecois wins less than 40% support in next spring's referendum "we'd be best off to . . . think of something else."

This startlingly frank statement comes in an interview with Levesque published in the French news magazine Le Point.

Asked if he would resign in the face of such a defeat, the PQ leader said he would retain little interest in politics with a poor referendum result. "I will doubtless remain until the next provincial election — which we must hold before November, 1981 — but without much conviction."

In the past, Levesque has usually said the Quebec independence movement could not be stopped.

The interviewer asked Levesque why the referendum question, made public last December, was merely seeking a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association rather than asking Quebecers directly if they support Quebec independence.

Levesque replied: "We could have certainly asked people a question which was sufficiently brutal so that we would be sure to lose. But we're not completely stupid."

He said he would prefer seeing Pierre Trudeau as prime minister.

Hostage plan past ayatollah

Times News Services

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said today Ayatollah Khomeini had accepted a secret plan for the release of 50 American hostages.

"When we presented an action plan to him, he accepted it," Bani-Sadr said in an interview with Paris radio.

(See earlier story on page 14).

Bani-Sadr was asked if force would be used to get the hostages out of the American embassy in Tehran and he said, "With the agreement of the imam (Khomeini), there is no need for force".

No timetable for freeing the hostages has been set, Iran's Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said today.

Meanwhile, it was reported Khomeini would remain in hospital for an indefinite period, although his condition continues to improve.

The 79-year-old religious leader has been confined to a Tehran hospital recovering from a heart ailment.

When he is released, his doctors said today, he will remain in Tehran rather than return to his residence in the holy city of Qom, 160 kilometres south of Tehran.

Boycott pushed

Times News Services

President Jimmy Carter, thwarted in his efforts to have the Summer Olympics moved out of Moscow, Tuesday stepped up efforts for a U.S. boycott of the Games.

An hour after the International Olympic Committee rejected Carter's proposal for a Moscow pull-out because of Soviet intervention in Afghanstian, White House press secretary Jody Powell issued a statement urging the U.S. Olympic committee to boycott the event.

The statement made it clear there would be no political support for sending a team.

Voter interest higher now than last May

MONTREAL (CP) — A new Gallup poll, released today, says 82 per cent of the people surveyed indicated they intended to vote in next Monday's federal election.

This compares with 81 per cent before last May's election and 76 per cent in 1974. In each case, the actual turnout was below the poll figure.

In all, 43 per cent of the respondents said they were "very interested" in the campaign — slightly more than last May — and 37 per cent said they were moderately interested.

Another 20 per cent indicated no interest.

Campaigning in Montreal Tuesday, NDP leader Ed Broadbent basked in the glow of an election endorsement from one of Quebec's most powerful French-language newspapers Le Devoir, but conceded his party has little hope of winning any seats in a province that has frozen it out since the party was formed.

Trudeau is the "master of the half-answer," Clark told an evening rally attended by about 1,100 supporters as he claimed the Liberals might raise the excise tax on gasoline by up to five cents a litre (20 cents a gallon) to cover the cost of subsidies on imported oil.

In Toronto Tuesday, Trudeau, announcing what was described as an industrial strategy for Canada, said a Liberal government would make sure foreign-owned firms act in Canada's best interest and actively pursue the establishment of a Japanese-style state trading agency to funnel Canadian exports abroad.

Carter moves combat units

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, in a new hands-off signal to the Soviet Union, is ordering an amphibious warfare unit, including 1,800 U.S. marines, to sail next month to waters near the Persian Gulf.

Administration officials, who disclosed the impending move Tuesday night, stressed that it is intended as part of President Carter's measured effort to deter any Soviet designs on control of the oil-rich region.

The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in late December has prompted the Carter administration to intensify military moves designed to safeguard U.S. access to Persian Gulf oil.

A step-up in the U.S. military presence in the Indian Ocean area was already under way as a result of the overthrow of the pro-American shah of Iran a year ago, increased instability in the region and finally, the seizure of the U.S. Embassy and the taking of hostages last November.

However, officials said the latest move was not related in any way to the continued imprisonment of the hostages.

This will be the first time, as far as officials can recall, that a marine combat unit has been sent into the Indian Ocean area.

The officials, asking to remain anonymous, said a reinforced battalion from the 3rd Marine Division arrived Tuesday at the U.S. naval base in Subic Bay, the Philippines, aboard a four-ship amphibious force. They brought with them M-60 tanks, 105-mm artillery, anti-tank missiles and 18 troop-carrying helicopters.

Officials said the marines will carry out exercises in the Philippines for about two weeks and then enter the Indian Ocean for the long sail to the Arabian Sea, joining carrier-led U.S. naval forces that have been covering approaches to the Persian Gulf for several months.

The marines are expected to remain at sea for an indefinite period, with no indications of any U.S. intentions to land them even in manoeuvres.

The Cairo newspaper Al Akhbar reported today a Soviet ship carrying 1,200 Cuban soldiers entered the Suez canal on its way to Marxist-ruled South Yemen at the southern entrance of the Red Sea.

The report said the Leonid Sobinov, a 21,370-ton passenger and general cargo vessel, made its way into Port Said at the northern tip of the canal Tuesday night. The ship started its journey from

Tito worsens

BELGRADE (UPI) — President Jozip Broz Tito's already deteriorated condition has taken a new turn for the worse, an official medical bulletin said today.

"Today the general health condition of President Josip Broz Tito has worsened," the bulletin said.

"The functions of kidneys and the heart have further weakened.

"Intensive medical treatment is being undertaken."

It was the most pessimistic medical bulletin yet on the health of the 87-year-old leader.

Havana and travelled through the Mediterranean before entering the canal on its way south, it said.

South Yemen and the Soviet union signed a friendship-and-co-operation treaty last year, and the Russians along with their Cuban allies already have military advisers in South Yemen.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi told visiting Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko that regional tensions would be reduced if Soviet troops withdrew from Afghanistan, an Indian government spokesman said.

Gromyko, arriving in New Delhi on a two-day official visit, was given India's views on defusing the crisis during a three-hour meeting with Mrs. Gandhi, including almost 25 minutes with no aides present. They were scheduled to meet again today.

While Mrs. Gandhi talked with Gromyko, about 250 Afghans and Indians demonstrated outside the Soviet Embassy to protest Gromyko's visit and the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. Police stopped the demonstrators from reaching the embassy as they shouted "Gromyko, Go Home" and "Death to (Soviet President Leonid) Brezhnev."

In Washington, President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, said the U.S. will view as insufficient anything less than a total withdrawal of the estimated 90,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

In Tehran, Iran's newly-elected president, Abolhassan Bani-Sadr was quoted by the official Radio Tehran as saying he had received assurances from Moscow that the Soviet troops would be withdrawn soon. The report did not indicate how Bani-Sadr had received the information or whether he had been assured there would be a complete withdrawal.

Earlier in the day, Iranian officials had disclosed part of the contents of a message Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini had sent Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev critical of the Soviet intervention.

Khomeini warned that Moscow should not use force against any Islamic country if it wanted good relations with Iran.

He said the Quebec police seized a number of records in a raid about four years ago.

McConville said he had no further contact with police until late last month when he received a summons to appear in court in Quebec March 18.

The Crown alleges it gave a compensation, benefit or advantage to a functionary the Quebec liquor board between Dec. 23, 1969, and March 26, 1976.

McConville said his company decided even before the raid four years ago, to stop giving contributions to political parties.

"We felt we would run the risk of being pilloried if we continued and so we decided we wouldn't give any contributions whatsoever."

He admitted contributions had been made before that time but was unable to give details.

Mollach said virtually everyone in the liquor industry is being investigated.

And he noted it is not an offence for someone to make a contribution for political purposes "unless you can show it was done to force some benefit."

In its report, The Fifth Estate noted cheques from L. J. McGuinness and Co. Ltd. distilleries in Toronto were made out to a variety of political funds and fund raisers including Ontario Progressive Conservative Harry Price, P.E.I. Liberal Sidney Green, New Brunswick Conservative Larry Makem, a Quebec Liberal election fund, a Social Credit election fund and the Manitoba NDP.

The report focussed on a number of cheques totalling more than $60,000 made out to former Nova Scotia Liberal fund raiser J. G. Simpson.

When Simpson refused to comment on the McGuinness contributions, The Fifth Estate went to former Nova Scotia premier Gerald Regan, who was head of the Liberal party when the funds were collected. Regan denied any knowledge of the matter.

To recoup the $17 to $20 a pound paid B.C. fishermen in 1979 for the raw roe, Japanese wholesalers started offering the cured roe early in December at 13,000 yen a kilogram (about $30 a pound).

The retail price was about double and there were few takers.

"The first job we have to do is to get the consumers back. They stayed away in droves," Spitz said.

"We have to get prices down to the level where they are realistic. We've got to try and get that market back."

He said the prices being asked by the fishermen were ridiculous.

"It's an economic reality; you can't operate if you're going to go broke. Each individual company has to have some realism. Operating with no profit is one thing but losing a $1 million is another."

But UFAWU researcher Susan Radosevic said in Vancouver high retail prices were not the only reason Japanese consumers had rejected the roe in favor of other products.

She said the Canadian government's department of industry, trade and commerce in Ottawa had confirmed the backlash was also been due to the use of a bleaching agent, hydrogen peroxide, during reprocessing in Japan.

Firm's ad looks like invoice

An application for a cheque protection service being mailed to businessmen in this area may be mistaken for an invoice, the manager of the Victoria Better Business Bureau says.

Denny Ryan said businessmen should be wary of applications submitted by Chequewriter Insurance.

The form offers $15,000 forgery and cheque alteration insurance and a mechanical service contract for 12 months for a fee of $99.50.

Ryan said BBB offices have received complaints the forms could be easily mistaken for invoices from cheque protection firms already serving the businesses.

He said the BBB in Toronto reported the firm had sent out application forms to 38,600 businesses across Canada, for a total dollar value of $38 million.

Ryan advised company managers to ensure their accounting staffs double-check all invoices.

"If a strange one appears in the mail make certain the service or the product being charged for is indeed valid," he said.

Edmonton synagogue torched

EDMONTON (CP) — Priceless religious manuscripts were destroyed in a deliberately-set fire which caused an estimated $1 million damage to the Beth Shalom synagogue near downtown Edmonton early today.

More than 60 firefighters battled thick smoke and flames for nearly two hours to contain the fire.

Six sheepskin Torah scrolls — one more than 100 years old — were consumed when the fire swept through the synagogue's sanctuary area, destroying the Holy Ark.

"They're the word of God, they're holy and they're irreplaceable," said Rabbi Saul Hyman.

Fire investigators said a "series of small fires were deliberately set throughout the area of the sanctuary."

Fire department officials said the building was apparently broken into sometime before the alarm was raised.

Poor Joe's lament: Where are you guys?

VANCOUVER — Poor Joe Clark moans that he's been done in by his image, but you could make a case that it's his friends who have done more damage

It is most interesting to note all the prominent Tories who supposedly could have helped Clark in this campaign, but have chosen not to, taking it on the lam like burglars with some hot silverware.

We will recall that a prominent theme of the short and unhappy life of the Clarkian parliament was that he, unlike Pierre Trudeau, got along with the provinces. No more tiffs, no more gun-slinger confrontations, merely sweetness and light.

It was drummed into the electorate by the Tories that there wasn't a single provincial Liberal government left in the land, all of them having deserted lonely Pierre .

Well, as we mercifully wind down this campaign, one would think there wasn't a single Tory one either. All has been silence, all has been invisible.The junior partners of Prime Minister Clark have slunk for cover and developed a sudden interest in foreign climes.

Most prominent absentee, of course, has been Ontario Premier Bill Davis, who gives all indications of not having too much regard for the abilities of Mr. Clark.

It's no secret that the high-powered operatives around the Big Blue Machine by early last fall were entirely unimpressed with some of the boy scouts around the PM. The Davis people went so far as to commission a poll demonstrating the plunge in Clark's popularity in southern Ontario and took it to Ottawa. They were ignored.

While this campaign slogged through its first month, Davis sunned himself in Florida. He returned for a supposed endorsement of Clark, giving him a handshake like a wet fish before the cameras at Queen's Park, but then shook his head slowly from side to side when Clark, into the microphones, said that Davis would be campaigning "vigorously" for him.

The Davis interpretation of vigor, in the vital closing days of the campaign, was to disappear into the U.S. again on a so-called "trade mission" to Boston, New York and Atlanta. Not too many Tories there.

Peter Lougheed of Alberta was prepared to go even further than Davis to put some distance between himself and Clark.

The man that Clark once worked for, the man who didn't even stay in the Ottawa Civic Centre for the final balloting that elected Clark leader in 1976, the man who owns a province with 21 solid Tory seats — this man hasn't done a single thing to help Clark in this campaign.

Lougheed first fled to the perils of a Hawaiian beach for fear that he might bump into a Tory lawn-sign. He had barely returned when he left — unannounced — last week for a 10-day tour of European financial centres, a ploy that will keep him safely out of the whole campaign.

Another Tory premier, Sterling Lyon of Manitoba, has done nothing to "help" Clark, though this is probably useful since Lyon is regarded as the single most unpopular politician in Canada, and Clark would willingly chip in 25 bucks for his Honolulu airfare.

There's the case of Brian Peckford of Newfoundland, the newest and most energetic of the Tory premiers. Instead of a help, he's been an embarrassment, demanding noisily and naively that Clark put in writing before Feb.18 the island's right to its offshore oil boodle.

There is the case of Bill Bennett of B.C, where Socreds are web-footed Tories in disguise and there is the use usual cross-over in voting patterns. Mini-WAC, alas, is up to his fetlocks in petty scandal and Clark doesn't dare touch him with a 10-foot Sasquatch.

The only Tory premier with the verve (or the nerve?) to come right out for Clark is New Brunswick's Dick Hatfield but, as happenstance would have it, he fractured one of his walking legs at Christmas and though his tongue hasn't been slowed, his gait has.

It all contrasts so vividly with what can be done, if the heart and desire are there. Saskatchewan's Allan Blakeney is stumping the whole province on behalf of Ed Broadbent and when the NDP chief comes to B.C., he joins with Dave Barrett in a highly-successful tandem act that proved so valuable last May.

For the Liberals, even Don Macdonald , who had been left out to dry by Trudeau, has visited 32 ridings across the country, fighting for his party.

But Clark? With seven Tory premiers supposedly on his side, only one has been any real use to him

Quick rescue possible

VANCOUVER (CP) — A privately-owned tugboat could have begun a rescue attempt an hour after the Taiwanese freighter Lee Wang Zin signalled it was in trouble if the Canadian Coast Guard had requested help, a tugboat captain told an inquest Tuesday.

Michael Stevenson, captain of the Cindy Mozel — the first vessel to reach the overturned ore carrier off the Alaska coast 29 hours after the Lee Wang Zin's first distress call — said he could have moved in "quick order" if his firm had been asked to help on Christmas Day.

The ore carrier capsized on Christmas Day shortly after leaving port on a voyage to Japan. It was carrying a load of iron ore pellets from the Tasu mine on the Queen Charlotte Islands in Northern British Columbia.

All 30 crew members are believed to have drowned although only two bodies were recovered.

Stevenson, who recovered one of the bodies, testified that there was a large dent on the starboard bow of the Lee Wang Zin's hull but because of poor weather he could not see if there was an open gash.

Stevenson, a tug captain for Rivtow Straits Ltd., said he first heard of the trouble the Lee Wang Zin faced between noon and 1 p.m. Christmas Day when his boss called him at home in Prince Rupert. Earlier testimony has established that the first distress call was at 9:17 a.m.

He said he told his boss, Vince Brown, that he was ready to go and could have a crew rounded up in an hour for the 24-metre tug Cindy Mozel.

But the coast guard did not ask the company to go out to look for survivors and an hour-and-a-half later, a coast guard helicopter reported there were no signs of life near the capsized freighter.

Stevenson said under questioning it would have taken six to seven hours for the Cindy Mozel to reach the Lee Wang Zin and after dark it would have been difficult to spot survivors unless they were in a lifeboat. He said he would not risk the lives of his crew in the rough seas if it was known there were no survivors, but would have gone if there was a request to pick up survivors.

In earlier testimony Tuesday, a Prince Rupert port official said the capsizing of the Lee Wang Zin probably happened abruptly and without warning.

Frederick Bullen, senior marine surveyor and port warden, said the vessel was not in exposed seas when it turned over and he discounted the possibility that the cargo of about 54,000 tons of iron pellets had shifted.

Waterfront unions sued

VANCOUVER (CP) — A damage action was filed in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday by 26 waterfront employers against the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and some of its local officials.

The employers are claiming compensation for illegal work stoppages on the waterfront in Vancouver Monday and on July 27 last year and in New Westminster on July 23-24 last year.

The writ alleges breach of contract and "conspiracy to injure the plaintiffs as a consequence of illegal work stoppages.

In addition to the international, the defendants are Locals 500 and 502 and officials Lorne Papou, William Carrigan, James Peters and Conrad Ferguson.

Work on the Vancouver docks returned to normal late Monday after a walkout early in the day by longshoremen. They returned to work after the industry's job arbitrator ruled that the day shift walkout contravened the collective agreement.

The longshoremen closed down the union's dispatch hall in a dispute over handling of Canadian National Railways cars delivering materials to the Dow Chemical distribution centre in North Vancouver. They claimed jurisdiction over the cars, which pass through National Harbors Board property at Lynnterm.

The B.C. Grain Shippers Clearance Association said the disruption cost thousands of dollars.

New act needed

The federal Juvenile Delinquents Act has been under review for more than a decade. Succeedjng federal governments have put out white papers, held community studies, and asked hundreds of judges and lawyers for recommendations.

Yet the act has not been altered substantially since 1930. Although a few technical changes have been made, its principles are the same as those applied to children before the coming of television, before the burgeoning of single-parent families, before the development of most modern theory in criminology, corrections and child development.

A court decision in B.C. last month has emphasized just how archaic the act is and how important that its updating be an immediate priority of the new federal government.

In the court decision, Mr. Justice George Murray of the B.C. Supreme Court ruled that under the act, any juvenile can be sentenced to an "industrial school" (the act's euphemistic term for a jail for juveniles) for an indefinite period, no matter what his or her age.

The B.C. provincial government had attempted to set some limits on the use of industrial schools. It had imposed rules that only juveniles who were at least 14 years of age, had committed a serious offence, and were deemed beyond reach of all community resources could be sent there. Also judges could not sentence juveniles to the schools for more than two years.

Mr. Justice Murray ruled, however, that the terms of the old federal Juvenile Delinquents Act made these rules unenforceable.

In the 50 years since the act was put into force, researchers have discovered the harmful effects of jail on most young people. They have discovered that most juveniles come out more hardened criminals than they were when they went in.

Moreover, corrections officials have developed new types of accountability procedures that were unheard of in 1930 — ideas like community service and repayment to the victim of crime. These are much more effective for many juveniles than terms in jail.

Also, community sentiments have changed. Although the public very much wants juveniles to be accountable for their criminal behavior, it does not agree with a law that allows a child to be punished for behavior that would be legal if done by an adult, or punished much more severely than an adult would be for the same offence.

Clean industry

The most desirable way to ease Greater Victoria's dependence on the tourist trade is the creation of a 'knowledge' industries, endeavors with an emphasis on high technology. Because this type of industry is deemed most suitable for both providing jobs and preserving the region's natural character, yesterday's announcement that a marine technological centre is to be built on the Saanich Peninsula is a step in the right direction.

An agreement between the federal and provincial governments initially will see the construction of a 35,000 square foot building on a 17-acre site next to the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay. Three more buildings are on the planning board for the same site and will be constructed if demand warrants them. The project is being funded by a $1.2 million loan under the federal-provincial Industrial Development Subsidiary Argreement.

This technological centre has been conceived for private firms engaged in marine-related research and development. These businesses eventually will provide an estimated 170 well-paid jobs in various professional and technical fields.

It is believed that high-technology industry would have the least impact on the region's natural environment, in part because it can be housed in structures pleasing to the eye. The new center at Pat Bay is supposed to be built to look like an university campus. If that is the case it can be designed to blend with the landscape.

Coming five days before a federal election, such an announcement can certainly be construed as an election ploy. But ploy or not, the development is in line with the best possible route for economic diversification and we should be glad to have it.

RICHARD GWYN

Chance of western isolation

EDMONTON — Over the lunch, the Edmonton Journal reporter and I discussed oil prices, about which we agreed to disagree, and Joe Clark's election chances, which we agreed were slim and getting slimmer.

Afterwards, he drove me over to a friend's place. During the drive, at one moment he turned and said, like a codocil to our earlier conversation, "You couldn't understand how pleasant it has been these past six months not to have to feel that your prime minister was your enemy. I dread what's going to happen in this province after February 18.

As yet, few Albertans realize that the first federal government since John Diefenbaker's back in 1963, of which they have felt themselves to be a part, is heading towards defeat. After all, when you know, as do all Albertans, that all your first cousins down the road are going to vote Conservative, you tend to assume that all your second cousins in other provinces are going to vote the same way.

Shock, then anger

The first thing that will happen here the day after February 18 — assuming Clark doesn't bring off the near-miracle he needs now — will be shock. Then anger. Then a defiant turning-inward to the one government Albertans will be able to feel that they are a part of — their own provincial government.

From a distance, Alberta looks like a threatening giant, rich, braggart, self-confident. Close-up, you are struck immediately by the ungainliness of the giant, like that adolescent who has shot up too fast for his own strength, and who is insecure, self-conscious and defensive. You are struck as well how Alberta's wealth is almost all in income rather than in accumulated capital: You'd have to search hard in the Maritimes to find a strip of cityscape as mean and as tacky as the drive into Edmonton from its airport.

This is the source of the sadness in the reporter's comment. He and others here — later, a businessman said almost the same thing — are worried deeply that Albertans, after just six months of feeling themselves in step with the rest of the country, soon will be forced back again into their historic, and self-defeating, sense of grievance and of isolation.

The attitudes of Albertans toward us, and of us toward them, matter because these attitudes will shape Confederation in the '80s at least as much as will attitudes between Quebec and the rest of Canada.

Indeed, the two events are intertwined. Pierre Trudeau, assuming he wins, will begin his negotiations with Alberta for a new, less favorable to Alberta, oil deal on the eve of the referendum in which Rene Levesque will be asking Quebecers for a mandate to negotiate a new deal between Quebec and the rest of the country. Whatever is done to Alberta, Levesque will be able to say, may be done to Quebecers, at another time and in another way (a grab for hydro power, perhaps).

Perhaps the most reckless, and certainly the least-informed, of remarks made about Alberta were those of Ontario Liberal Leader Stuart Smith. Last December, Smith said Albertans had to realize they could not be "a member of OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) and Canada at the same time."

Far from acting like a member of OPEC, Albertans, by accepting a price today of $19.75 a barrel compared to the international price of $80, have subsidized the rest of the country to the extent of more than $15 billion through the last half-dozen years. For their behavior last year, Albertans would have been excommunicated from OPEC: They accepted, though almost no Canadians realize this, an actual decrease in oil prices. (The $1 a barrel increase in 1979 lagged, by one-third, behind the increase needed to match inflation.)

A few more facts, better-known ones this time. From 1.3 million barrels a day today, production of Alberta crude will decline by more than half, to 590,000 barrels a day, by 1990, and thereafter will dwindle away. We are sucking out Alberta's last, best reserves and are selling this off at bargain-basement prices in order to subsidize our own over-consumption (the highest in the world). This policy the prestigious British magazine The Economist has described as "the most distorted in the developed world."

Fail to recycle

These facts, of course, don't end the argument. There is the Heritage Fund, $6 billion today and perhaps $100 billion by the end of the century. By failing to recycle this money to the rest of the country, Lougheed had turned the fund into the political equivalent of King Midas' lethal golden touch. As well, we've subsidized our industrial and personal energy inefficiency for so long now that we couldn't survive the cold-turkey shock of world oil prices.

The point about the argument is that it has two sides. We wasted much of the '70s because we were so slow to recognize that all Quebecers really wanted to be, at one and the same time, was Quebecers and Canadians. The formula amounts to mutual respect. We'll waste much of the '80s unless we realize that this, rather than money, is all that Albertans really want. Mind you, it would help if Lougheed had the same engaging grin as Levesque.

How sad, but typical, that the west coast tanker route and oil port decision is being used as a political football! I don't remember it being an issue in the May 22 election and yet the decision by President Carter to opt for the Northern Tier proposal (a superport at Port Angeles) has been 11 years in the making — ever since the discovery of oil on the north slope of Alaska.

When the Thompson Enquiry was squashed by Mr. Trudeau and his cabinet in 1977 before the vital issues of marine, environmental, fishing, economic, and social questions were discussed, why didn't the newspapers, and each and every B.C. MP and MLA demand that it be allowed to continue. The facts that should have been examined in these subjects would have been the background data upon which a superport decision was made.

Instead, we have had sophisticated and expensive lobbying by the competing oil companies to win the very lucrative contract. With the current political scene, the Americans have chosen an all-American route regardless of future environmental damage.

Provincial and federal governments are based on the party system but there are many issues which supersede party politics, particularly environmental issues. Why can't we stop playing political games and co-operate in the best interests of British Columbians and Canadians?

It is not realistic to think that the public or even environmental groups can keep an issue hot for 11 years. As President of Bluepeace, I have a box of meaningless letters from politicians of all parties, sidestepping the real issues. Without an oil disaster on our shores, the public interest turned to other issues but surely it is the politicians, who make the decisions on these questions who should know when to push an issue (the time is not three months before a final American decision!). — Virginia Gareau, 3503 Camcrest Place.

Lack of secrecy

Canadian travellers the world over have been well respected. To wear a maple leaf or other Canadian emblem, assured the wearer of every courtesy.

This special treatment was helped in part by our late Prime Minister Lester Pearson, while Canadian Ambassador at the United Nations, receiving the Nobel Peace Prize for his dedication to world peace. Also, in the following years, our foreign affairs diplomats, using the same approach, were very careful never to interfere in the internal affairs of any country, whether leftist or rightist. Our generous aid to third world countries was also well recognized, and specially so to the many thousands of underprivileged.

However, of late, our Maple Leaf has started to wilt. Last May, our present government, before being elected, promised to move our embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem. The oil rich Arab world were quite unhappy — so much so, that Canadian firms such as Atco and Bell Telephone lost many millions of dollars in cancelled contracts. However, we partially pacified the Arab shieks by sending a goodwill ambassador and his entourage to pay homage. The cost of course, charged to the poor old taxpayer.

So phase one of our foreign affairs was resolved. But, phase two was a greater blunder. On the advice from Ottawa, and possibly Washington, we were hosts in our Canadian embassy in Tehran, to six American embassy staff for well over two months, and at last shipped them home on forged Canadian passorts.

This act alone, put Canada in the same category as Iran, whom we have condemned as criminals, so therefore we are also criminals.

No true Canadian is condemning this exercise, because it was humane thing to do; but the real stupidity of the scheme makes one wonder if it was political or humanitarian. These six Americans remained in the Canadian embassy for more than sixty days. They could have been flown out on the same forged papers, in absolute secrecy, at any time, and our embassy would still be in Tehran, perhaps of great help to the remaining hostages.

I wonder if the present publicity will be a boost to the sagging fortunes of both Clarke and Carter. — D. J. Payette, 116-535 Niagra Street.

Sad sight

On Jan. 31, I witnessed the sad sight of the Victoria General Hospital Board using a legal loophole to set aside their own abortion committee in order to carry out the board's apparent philosophy of abortion on demand. With only one negative vote (Sister Kathleen Cyr) they appointed the Royal Jubilee abortion committee as a committee of the VGH also. It's all quite legal and convenient but the board is avoiding its major responsibility to good patient care and imposing its own philosophy.

The VGH board commended their committee for their diligence and knowledge. They admitted physicians are very reluctant to sit on an abortion committee. They know their committee is not overworked by applications. They acknowledged that as a board they have no expertise in this medical matter. Thus the only reasn to appoint the Jubilee Committee is because that committee has characteristically approved 98 per cent of the abortion requests. Their own committee when using sound medical judgment approved a small fraction of that number.

The VGH board should study the scientific literature. They would find there is no good evidence that "therapeutic abortions" are therapeutic. Except in a few medical illnesses there is no proper evidence to show abortion is good treatment for pregnant women. Though the majority are done for "reactive depression" there are no established psychiatric reasons to do an abortion. There is growing evidence of short and long term harmful effects; infections, blood loss, uterine rupture, cervical tears, tubal pregnancies, miscarriages and low birth weight for subsequent pregnancies.

I'm hoping the Ministry of Health will sponsor a scientific session of experts to answer the question, "Is abortion good treatment for any health problem?"

Apart from a few individuals who may make a lot of money from abortions, all the doctors and nurses I know detest the whole messy business. If hospitals want abortions, hire some abortionists. Don't expect doctors to go against good medical judgment. — Philip Ney, MD, 1958 Fort Street.

Mobile force

During this brief election campaign we have not heard anything about the thorny problem of foreign aid and we should require a clear, intelligent, positive statement from all leaders of all political parties.

Not long ago we followed in the UN various speeches and so-called "resolutions" that have very little, if any, impact because the UN has no power to enforce any recommendations. Talks and talks are absolutely useless and it is time to translate talks into effective action.

What a great opportunity for our Prime Minister, to take the initiative in bringing about without delay new directions in the structure and role of the UN!

What the UN really needs is to have at her disposal a well-equipped, well trained very mobile and ready military force, made up by a proportionate number of all her members to be dispatched on trouble spots around the world, to act as a peace-keeping force among beligerent factions, to supervise distribution of food and medical supplies, to establish well kept clinics, shelters and hospitals and to prevent an exodus of refugees who have the right to live in peace in their own surroundings.

On a very small scale this program of help-on-the-spot has met with great success in Cyprus, along the Gaza Strip and in other troubled areas.

The presence of an internatonal force in Cambodia, Thailand, between North and South Vietnam, etc. may bring about an end to guerilla warfare and prevent the dreadful hardship of people exposed to continuous dangers, famine and exile.

No doubt this program would be expensive but perhaps no more expensive than airlifts of "refugees" whose adaptation and acceptance of a totally strange new way of life may prove very difficult. Besides, and let us be totally frank and honest, the influx of a large number of refugees into other countries, including Canada, may present some serious problems for the hosts. We need answers, simple, clear, honest and to the point: no fancy speeches and no mudslinging. — E. I. Lattes, 432—200 Dallas Road.

Cheap theatrics

It was with disbelief that I watched Mr. Trudeau commend the actions of Joe Clark's government in the recent coup in Iran after openly criticizing his handling of foreign affairs in Iran over the past few months. This statement is especially hypocritical when we learn that Mr. Trudeau was kept fully informed as far back as November, 1979 as to the six Americans' presence in the Canadian Embassy. To condemn and then quickly commend the same series of actions after public disclosure brought worldwide approval to the Clark government is cheap political theatrics in its worst form.

How anyone could vote for a Liberal MP who would support this two-faced position is indeed "beyond reason"! — John L. Templeman, 237 Portsmouth Drive.

What's a hero?

The Canadian Press, like any self-respecting news agency, works hard to achieve responsible and credible reporting. Newapaper headline writers are generally encouraged to advance the information within the same framework.

This appears to have been overlooked, however, by the Times deskman whose three-column contribution to Page 2 of the Feb. 1 issue proclaims "Flora Gushes Thanks to 'Hero' Diplomat."

The CP story mentions heroics once, reporting that Ambassador Taylor returned "to a quiet hero's welcome". Why the headline writer chose to feature the word in quotes is intriguing but the effect could only be to suggest a phony quality to the ambassador's performance. If such dubious bravery existed, the place to raise the question was on the editorial page, not by doctoring the news.

I'm personally convinced that Taylor was and is a brave man and that his international acknowledgement speaks for itself. A cheap shot won't change the conviction. Now, to convince myself that a long-established newspaper ethic, though overlooked in this instance, will continue to guide its majority of responsible practitioners. — F. B. Watt, 404-1101 Hilda Street.

Editor's Note:, The use of the word hero in quotes in the hadline reflected a distinction between Ambassador Taylor's type of low-key heroism as distinct from that of the "conquering hero".

Greeks used Olympics too as forum for political hay

By HENRY MITCHELL
The Washington Post

Chances are you never really believed in Milo of Croton (the one who ate a whole cow at Olympia), and there are some other suspicious records of the early Olympic Games.

But the Greeks went only so far in the gentrification of jocks, and while they idolized them, they also understood them, and once you understand a hero is a human, you do not err by supposing he is any better than he ought to be, taking him all in all.

The Olympics were, of course, a religious festival, and here again the Greeks understood a great deal. There was that king, you recall, with the beautiful daughter whom he placed in the marriage market, with the inconvenient (to more than a dozen unlucky suitors) proviso that the bridegroom had to run off with her. Every time a young man did so, the king caught up and killed the fellow.

And then came Pelops, the suitor to end all suitors. He noticed the appalling number of young men killed in the quest for the princess and assumed he would fare no better if he played by the king's rules.

So he bribed the king's chariot driver to so damage the axle that it would break under pressure, and when the king raced off in hot pursuit of Pelops, expecting his usual success in slaughtering suitors, the axle did indeed break, tossing the king through the air to his death.

Pelops then wisely did away with the accomplice and, in honor of his prospects of a quiet and delicious marriage, instituted the Olympic Games, dedicating them to the gods.

Prissy folk, nowadays, would ask what kind of honor to the gods can spring from fraud, murder, etc., but the gods of Olympia allowed for little flaws in their worshippers. And even now a few flaws occur here and there in the Games, since, you must recall, humans not only take part in them but sponsor them.

In theory, the Games celebrate an athlete's quest for the highest excellence possible to the human body. In prctice, they are partly that, and partly a propaganda festival.

Unfortunately, perhaps, Americans are somewhat inept at propaganda and symbolism, so that one is not surprised, really, that the quarters for the athletes in the Winter Olympics at Lake Placid will be put to dandy use thereafter as a prison for criminals.

The Greeks themselves were always a bit uneasy about Pelops and his cheating in the chariot race — if you call busting your competitor's axle cheating, and surely you do — so they dated their formal history of the games from 776 B.C., some decades after Pelops' legendary founding of them.

The first winner was a cook, an excellent reminder that cooks can do some things well. He won the 200-yard dash.

Later, in the 6th century, this same Milo, who we do not think really ate the whole cow, not in one day, was the wonder of the world.

He repeatedly won the Olympic wrestling championship. And in private life he could stand on a huge greased platter and invite guys to push him off and nobody ever succeeded. In those days athletes were really strong, and Milo is only one of the ones who carried a life-sized statue (either of stone or of bronze) about as if it were no more than a sack of mortar mix.

By the 5th century the one-day divine festival of the games had increased to a five-day event, and since the athletes competed naked, and sensibly held the Games in warm weather, they did not have any of this Lake Placid business of bobsleds or luge (a wooden sled you cannot steer or brake, with no seat belts) or Alpine skiing or the rest.

We now like to think of those classical games as a sun-drenched, olive-browed excursion into the cleanest and purest fields of human effort. Fortunately, we do not know many details. We do know, and love to dwell on it, that when the Games took place every four years, there was a general truce. No war was allowed to interfere, and enemies could join to compete peacefully in honor of the gods.

It is true that archeologists, annoying nit-pickers as a class, suggest there was a good bit of commercial hoopla at the Games with guys making a buck on souvenir statues of Zeus and even — Lord, what next? — whorehouses.

And although the Games were in theory above politics, naughty rulers often stooped to using the games for political hay-making.

It is neither necessary or credible, in other words, to assume the Games were utterly noble, even in classical times.

But perhaps like religion itself, which the Games honored, there was a light at the heart of the concept that no pollution could fully cloud over.

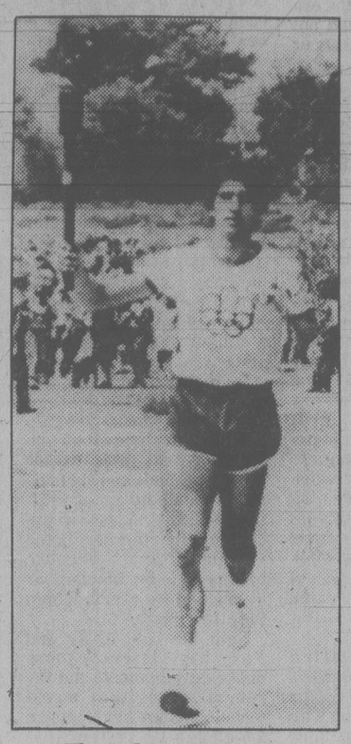
Nobody is likely to forget the murder of Israeli athletes — one of the most contemptible crimes of this century — and the list could go on with things unfair, with sad accidents of death on the sleds and the ski slopes.

There also have been occasions, in the Games, in which the American press has virtually ignored important victories of others, and dwelt largely on our own successes:

"Bouroland today won eight gold medals in various events and Upper Downy captured six, and we have been talking with another victor, Chuck Dandythumb, who has won for the United States the coveted parchment scroll for fourth place in bowling. Tell us about it, Chuck. 'Well, it was pretty tough, etc., etc . . . "

Let it be. No mortal enterprise meets all the requirements of a dream. But even today you would walk across a room — hell, across two rooms — to meet an Olympic winner.

There is this to be thought of, too: Men as good as Socrates took in those Games, as spectators. Pindar revved himself up to such heights of verse, celebrating victors of Games, that to this day he is mere gibberish translated into our language, because the greater the poetry the greater the impossiblity of wrenching it from the throat the gods gave it.



The gods are watching

If any guy thinks he is going to swindle the gods, in the Games or elsewhere, he is wrong. But the one who eats plain and sweats hard, and in a fair contest against the best still wins, is lucky.

There'll be a god that stands near him for the rest of his life, brooding over everything that happens and not letting it work out too badly.

The jocks are attendant on valor, they struggle to win, though the end is veiled in danger. But if they succeed, even their neighbors think them wise.

There are lots of ways to happiness if the gods allow it, but to win at Olympia, the olive branches, that is a big thing. It helps him forget hell. Even death that comes does not obliterate that grace or tear up that garland.

Never mind those who make fun of jocks. They do it to keep from seeming awe-struck. On with the Games that honor the gods. Draw near with faith.

Is it an 'invasion' or 'intervention'?

By ROBERT FISK
The Times, London

KABUL, Afghanistan — Not long ago, the Voice of America radio, broadcasting from Washington, reported fierce fighting in Kabul. Afghan soldiers, the station announced, were in conflict with Soviet troops at the Bala Hissar Fort in the centre of the city.

It happened that I was listening to the broadcast as I stood on my hotel balcony, which overlooks Kabul, and I naturally directed my gaze toward the Bala Hissar.

There it still stood, its brown stone walls clearly visible on a small hill, just as it was when the British occupied it in the 19th century.

But there was no smoke or fire, no sound of car horns from the city's traffic, nor was there any fighting.

The Bala Hissar was peaceful. There were no Soviet troops to be seen, and the Afghan army — never an impressive sight — was evidenced only by a soldier drinking tea in a main street.

It was a powerful demonstration of the difference between the credibility given to long distance rumors and the factual evidence. Not to put too fine a point upon it, the Voice of America was talking rubbish.

It was not the only gross exaggeration to emerge from the American radio station since the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, and it is one reason why many Afghans are turning with increased enthusiasm to the BBC whose short wave transmissions to Afghanistan have just been increased by half an hour, to the intense annoyance of the Afghan government.

The BBC certainly provides the most impartial news service for Afghans. Their only other sources of information are Radio Peking, whose strident Maoist ideology does not appeal to Muslims, and Radio Moscow, whose news reports are in direct contradiction to almost everything one sees in Afghanistan.

How, for instance, can one accept those repeated assurances that only a very limited contingent of Soviet troops are in the country when from that same hotel balcony I can also see a Russian military transport depot that covers almost two square miles, in itself representing a mere fraction of the Russian military presence in Afghanistan?

But there are other, wider issues involved in the international interpretation of the crisis here.

Is it a Soviet "invasion" for example, or an "intervention"?

"Intervention" is perhaps a coy word, yet "invasion" carries with it the implication that cities have been razed and that many thousands of civilians have been killed.

There is little doubt that hundreds of Afghans have died fighting their own Communist regime, but there is scarce evidence that the Russians have themselves taken part in indiscriminate killings since December's coup.

Indeed, one of the ironies of the Russian presence in Afghanistan is that for the first time in Soviet history, Western journalists have had virtually undisputed freedom to roam around a Russian military operational area and talk to ordinary Soviet troops. The Kremlin is allegedly furious at such unprecedented breaches of security and has predictably failed to appreciate that individual Russian soldiers have as a result sometimes emerged in the Western press as both courteous and disciplined.

Meanwhile, in an attempt to reduce desertion and absenteeism in the Afghan army, Babrak Karmal, Afghanistan's prime minister, has announced an amnesty for the many of thousands of conscripts who have left their posts or refused to report for duty.

Deserters have caused a much greater attrition rate within the army than the insurgent tribesmen whom the military authorities are supposed to be fighting. Some estimates put absenteeism as high as 40 per cent.

Stay together

The upcoming federal election on Feb. 18 will offer one of the very few times that people will be able to benefit from hindsight.

We have been afforded a foretaste of life under a Progressive Conservative government.

Taking into account the present world energy shortage, it is insanity to consider tampering in any way with Petro Canada. Government ownership and control must be retained.

The country can ill afford a prime minister who accedes to the demands of the power-hungry provincial premiers for the sake of political gain in those areas.

Now, more than at any time in history, we urgently need a strong central government. If our federal government is going to parcel out offshore rights as in the case of B.C. and Newfoundland, and oil pricing jurisdiction to Alberta, what do we have left to offer to the other provinces as an incentive to hold the federal family together?

If these policies are put into effect could Canada be expected to provide armed forces to protect provincial sovereignty?

It would follow that the provinces should provide their own armed forces and set up their own old age pension, social welfare and unemployment insurance programs.

Is Canada to become just a fond dream in the hearts of her population, just another fine idea that somehow didn't work? Are we going to remain a family? — Don Malcolm, 539 Carnation Place.

Ottawa should pay

Vancouver Island, like the Atlantic provinces, doesn't have natural gas now. It doesn't have a low cost fuel alternative to oil, the supply of which is bound to be limited in the future.

This situation has to be corrected. In Eastern Canada plans are afoot to build a major pipeline to New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia. And it will be subsidized, heavily, by the Canadian government. Western gas will therefore be cheap in Halifax. It will be less expensive than oil because you and I, as Canadian taxpayers, will be footing the bill.

But what about the West Coast? What about Vancouver Island and a $200 millon dollar pipeline across Georgia Strait? It, too, will have to be subsidized if the price of natural gas in Victoria and Nanaimo is to be comparable to that paid in Vancouver.

As it is, space heating with oil costs twice as much as it would with gas supplied at Lower Mainland rates. Gas would also be much cheaper than electricity. But the key question remains — "who will subsidize the main pipeline to the Island?"

Logically, it is the federal government. Ottawa now pays for the large diameter pipeline moving oil from southern Ontario to Montreal. It will shortly be subsidizing natural gas going to the Maritimes. We who don't have access to Canadian gas should receive similar treatment. The federal government, in other words, should pay for a big gas line across Georgia Strait.

Is Ottawa thinking in those terms? Is it going to do something about gas on Vancouver Island? Now is the time to ask our federal candidates in the upcoming election. It will be interesting to hear what the Conservatives, the Liberals and the NDP have to say on this subject. — Jack Davis, MLA, North Vancouver-Seymour.

Share the blame

If I may reply to Mr. Lattes' letter, Definitive Terms, (Feb. 2) there is probably no better way to provide ineffective management of our nation than our electoral confrontation system. The electoral process is our greatest theatrical production and this year's show involves 1,496 candidates competing for 282 Emmy Awards.

Whether or not a majority government is elected, the members of Parliament will predominantly consist of lawyers, political professionals and economists with little if any knowledge of the physical factors that determine what can and cannot be done in a high energy consuming industrialized nation.

We still cannot accept the fact that the industrialization has increased our ability to convert raw resources into useful products and continues to decrease the number of workers required. We still fail to realize that technology is now replacing the workers in the non-primary sector. We are ignorant of these facts because our educational system fails to teach the true impact of industrialization on our economic and social system.

Our price system or monetary economic social system was designed for the distribution of a scarcity to an over-employed population. It requires a scarcity to support prices and return profits on the one hand but requires growth (the GNP) to keep unemployment at an acceptable level on the other hand; an anomaly if there ever was one. Therefore what we are asking of our politicians is to make an out of date, ineffective and inefficient system meet our expectations. Therefore we cannot blame only the politicians, so let us all share the blame for our political, economic, social and energy demise. — J. J. Gibson, 103-260 Michigan Street.

Parking troubles

Recently my husband and I, who are musicians, had occasion to work in downtown Victoria.

When we first arrived, he had to park to unload our instruments, which included a heavy organ, drums, sound system, etc. He parked in a loading zone for about a half hour and when he was finished and went out to move the van, he had a ticket for parking which cost him $10.

When our booking was over, he had to park in the same loading zone as there was no other way to get in or out and when he was finished he had another parking ticket for another $10.

We are wondering, since Victoria is on the island, how truck drivers manage, since 90 per cent of your goods must come from the Mainland. Do they all get stung for a $10 bill as we did, because they don't have a municipal licence (which we knew nothing about)?

Victoria is a beautiful city and we enjoyed our stay here, but we are thoroughly disgusted over what was done to us without a word of warning. We hope the tourists which throng to your city every summer don't get the kind of treatment we experienced. — Betty Hunt, 16201 Beach Road, White Rock.

Protest ads

We, the citizens of Canada, must protest.

The Liberal and Conservative parties are treating us like pre-school children, children who are rather slow, and who can be manipulated by TV admen. We have no alternative but to protest, by voting NDP. At least our minority government in 1972-1974 was honest, and worked for our future rather than being wholly preoccupied with power and personalities.

As an intelligent citizen, are you going to accept the childish mental status which is being foisted on you? Are you willing to cross the floor? Raise this question with your friends and neighbors. — H. D. Beach, 3443 Cardiff Place.

Laser weapons within 10 years

By RICHARD BURT
New York Times

WASHINGTON — The United States and the Soviet Union, working under conditions of high secrecy, have both made large strides in recent years toward developing a new generation of laser weapons that many experts believe could transform warfare on the ground and in outer space in the next decade.

The prospect of using high-energy laser beams to destroy military targets has been discussed in technical circles since the mid-1960s, when specialists began to examine various applications for the concentrated beams of light. Until recently it was widely assumed that the era of laser weapons would not dawn until the late 1990s or still later.

But, according to senior Pentagon officials and scientists in private industry, either or both of the superpowers are likely to demonstrate the feasibility of several types of laser weapons in the next 10 years. Government documents obtained by The New York Times disclosed that in past years the United States has devoted about $2 billion to research on laser weapons, and officials said that the Carter administration would spend over $200 million in 1980.

According to a secret "arms control impact statement" supplied to Congress last year, government scientists expect, over the coming decade, to build prototypes of laser weapons that could be used "for selected applications such as defence of ships, aircraft, high-value ground targets or satellites."

The report, entitled Directed Energy Programs, discloses that the U.S. Air Force is experimenting with several lasers for possible use in defending bombers and knocking down enemy satellites. It says that the service has already demonstrated the "lethality" of lasers against missiles at short ranges and that this year Air Force technicians will begin testing a five-megawatt laser fitted into wide-bodied jet to see whether it could be used to defend a new generation of bombers against attack.

A laser is a device that generates a nearly perfect beam of concentrated light in which the subatomic particles that constitute the beam, known as photons, travel on a parallel axis. Scientists believe that a beam produced by a five-megawatt laser would be able to melt objects in space at distances exceeding 5,000 miles. One megawatt equals a million watts of electrical power.

In theory, the laser appears as something of an "ultimate weapon" because laser beams travel at the speed of light (over 186,000 miles a second) and could be used repeatedly against different targets. A laser weapon would function best in the vacuum of space because beams can be blocked or attenuated by clouds within the atmosphere.

Both the U.S. Army and Navy have laser weapons under development, and the report states that naval technicians are developing a 2.5-megawatt system that could be used to protect ships from missile strikes.

The Soviet Union, meanwhile, is reported to have an active program for developing laser weapons. At a recent hearing before the Senate Armed Services Committee, Jack Vorona, the deputy director for scientific and technical intelligence, said the "USSR appears to be roughly comparable to the U.S. in the capability to develop high-energy laser systems."

"They have been working on the basic laser technologies as long as the U.S.," Vorona added, "and apparently have the expertise, manpower and resources to develop any type of weapon laser that the U.S. could."

In the annual military statement submitted to Congress recently, Secretary of Defence Harold Brown said that "although the Soviets may be investigating the application of high-energy lasers and even charged particle beams" to ballistic missile defences, "severe technical obstacles remain in the way of concerting this technology into a weapon system that would have any practical capability against ballistic missiles."

"We still have no evidence, moreover, that the Soviets have devised a way, even conceptually, to eliminate these obstacles."

Although lasers are being developed for numerous military roles, the Pentagon's Defence Science Board, a group of private consultants that regularly advises the defence secretary on technical matters, is said to have recently concluded that laser weapons are best suited for use in outer space, to destroy enemy satellites or even nuclear-armed missiles headed toward the United States.

The Air Force is known to be studying the use of lasers as anti-satellite weapons. The administration's 1979 report on directed energy programs said that the Pentagon's Advanced Research Projects Agency is developing a two-megawatt laser and "precision tracking and pointing hardware" that could enable the United States, in the 1980s, to orbit "space-based laser weapons."

"If deployed in sufficient numbers (less than 10)," the report says, "these laser satellites could defend American strategic communications and warning satellites against antisatellite attacks" by the Soviet Union. It also says that two laser-armed systems in space could be used to destroy "all Soviet low-orbit satellites" in less than 24 hours.

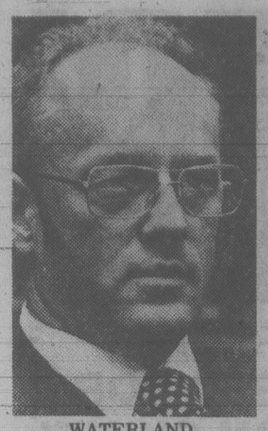
Logging halt called on Charlotte slopes



WATERLAND
. . . views mudslide

Logging on steep slopes on the Queen Charlotte Islands will be prohibited until techniques are developed to prevent further mud slides, Forests Minister Tom Waterland said Tuesday.

The minister said some logging will be permitted on stable land areas of the Islands, the site of a jurisdictional dispute between the provincial and federal governments last year.

Waterland and Environment Minister Steve Rogers toured the islands Monday, including the Rennell Sound area, scene of recent devastating mud slides which dumped tons of sediment into Riley Creek, ruining the spawning grounds there.

The forests minister said the slides, which are believed to have caused extensive damage to the salmon fisheries, probably resulted from construction of logging roads rather than from the log harvesting itself.

The forests minister said purpose of the trip was to review the area and meet with scientists and government officials to see "what we can do, what changes in harvesting techniques we need to reduce the chance of slope slippage and so on."

"We won't touch the obviously unstable areas until we can figure out how we can do it."

Unfortunately, he said, the stable sites have the low-quality timber on them, while the better-quality timber is growing on the hillsides which are moving all the time.

Waterland said a major factor is the large number of deer roaming throughout the islands, eating the ground covering which would provide the root system needed to stablize the soil and prevent it from slipping down hills.

He said his officials have been working with federal fisheries officials and outside consultants to prepare maps showing the various zones of slope stability and soil slippage with an eye to identifying risk areas.

In an attempt to prevent slides such as those which occurred in Rennell Sound, "one of the things we are doing is cross-ditching the roads," Waterland said.

As a result, he said, water is funnelled through the roads instead of running alongside and possibly washing them out.

The problem in Rennell Sound, Waterland said, is that the cross-ditch was built in an area where there was a natural piping effect and the extra water "greased it (the slope) right out, and away she went."

"As a result of that, one of things now required before cross-ditching is done, is a detailed, on-site field analysis beforehand so we don't put the ditches in places like that."

The confrontation between Ottawa and Victoria occurred when federal fisheries officers arrested 16 employees of Q.C. Timber Ltd. and charged them.

The B.C. Forest Service had given the company permission to log the area, saying there was no proof logging caused soil instability. Premier Bill Bennett eventually stepped into the dispute arguing that the province would fight for jurisdiction in the matter.

YOU-AND THE ELECTION

AS AN EMPLOYEE

If you are eligible to vote, you are entitled to four consecutive hours for voting while the polls are open on Election Day. If this entitlement means an absence from your place of employment, this is to be arranged at the convenience of your employer, but with no deduction in pay or any penalty. You can, if you and your employer agree, waive all or part of the time off to which you are entitled.

AS AN EMPLOYER

Every employee who is qualified to vote is entitled to have four consecutive hours without deduction in salary or penalty for the purpose of casting his ballot, while the polls are open on polling day at an election.

The Canada Elections Act permits employers and employees, if they mutually agree, to enter into an arrangement whereby the employees will not take all or any of the hours to which they are entitled on the day of the election.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE CANADA ELECTIONS ACT

The Commissioner of Canada Elections is responsible for ensuring that all provisions of the Act are complied with and enforced.

Complaints alleging violations of the Act should be directed, in writing, to the Commissioner as follows: The Commissioner of Canada Elections, 440 Coventry Road, Ottawa, Ontario. K1A 0M6. Upon investigation, if sufficient evidence is revealed to support prosecution, charges will be laid.

ELECTION DAY IS FEBRUARY 18TH

POLLS OPEN 9 A.M., CLOSE 8 P.M.

ELECTIONS CANADA

company reports

Dominion Bridge

Dominion Bridge Company Ltd. has reported a record net income in 1979 — an increase of 60 percent over the year — to $54.5 million.

Per-share earnings, $2.34, were up 46 percent over 1978 — adjusted for December's two-for-one split, with some 23.3 million shares outstanding, against 21.3 million shares in 1978.

The firm reported 1979 sales and other earnings of $961 million, against $886 million in the previous year.

Dominion said it was the 12th consecutive year the company recorded new sales and income records.

Canadian Pacific

Canadian Pacific Ltd. wracked up record profits of more than half a billion dollars in 1979, a 46-per-cent jump.

CP Rail, a subsidiary of CP Ltd., made record profits in 1979, reflecting higher prices and increased freight volume, while Canadian Pacific subsidiaries in metal mining, forest products and steelmaking showed strong gains. Canadian Pacific (Bermuda) Ltd., a shipping company, also showed a strong performance.

Total profits for the Canadian Pacific empire, which in addition includes companies engaged in oil exploration, real estate, hotels, insurance and other areas, hit $511 million, or $7.11 per ordinary shares, 46 per cent higher than restated 1978 net income of $349.8 million, or $4.85 a share.

For the final quarter of 1979, profits reached $143 million, 32 per cent higher than the $108.3 recorded in the same period in 1978.

McIntyre Mines

McIntyre Mines Ltd. of Calgary has reported consolidated earnings of $43,909,000 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1979, compared with a loss of $904,000 in 1978.

The consolidated earnings included extraordinary items of $7,424,000 in 1979 and $1,454,000 in 1978. Earnings before extraordinary items were $36,485,000 in 1979 compared with a loss of $2,358,000 in the previous year.

Earnings per share before extraordinary items amounted to $15.33 compared with a loss of 99 cents a share in 1978.

Coal sales amounted to 62,667,000 long tons in 1979, down from 105,270,000 long tons a earlier year. McIntyre had a loss from operations of $2,741,000 in 1979 compared with $2,264,000 in 1978.

McIntyre said the reduction in coal sales reflected the continued weakness in world-wide metallurgical coal markets caused by depressed demand for steel.

Consumers Gas has reported an income of $15.9 million for the first quarter of 1980 and Home Oil Co. reported preliminary results showed a 1979 income of $57.1 million.

Film new investment option

By GAIL LEM
The Canadian Press

Feature films are becoming an increasingly popular investment despite the high risk involved, says a Toronto businessman.

In a recent report, Robert Grandy, an associate of Wood Gundy Ltd., said the profit potential of the Canadian film industry is expanding and careful investments can mean attractive returns.

He said investors in high income tax brackets are finding that feature-length motion pictures are useful tax-deferral vehicles.

Under incentives introduced under the Canadian Income Tax Act in 1976, investors in a certified feature production which is completed before the end of the year can deduct 100 per cent of the cost of their investment from 1980 income from any source.

They can also participate in any commercial returns generated from the film.

Until recently, few Canadian films have returned their investment and fewer have earned a profit, he said.

Part of the problem was that most films produced in Canada were made primarily for local audiences. They weren't meant to be commercially competitive with major U.S. and international films.

But the change in the Income Tax Act has created greater interest in film investment, Grandy said, and that interest has been reflected by an increase in the number of films being produced for the international market.

Grandy has the following tips for potential investors who want to evaluate film investment opportunities:

—The film should be marketable to a wide viewing audience and should not have a restricted rating.

—It should primarily be designed for theatre rather than television. Potential revenues from theatre are higher than those from television.

—Although production track record and well-known actors cannot ensure box-office success, risk tends to be lower with established personnel and a history of commercial successes.

—The level of box office revenues required to recoup costs and make a profit are proportionate to the size of the budget and the level of promotional costs. Grandy said the average cost of good-quality international films produced recently in Canada is in the $5-million range and promotional costs may be as much as $2 million to $3 million more.

—No film is likely to reach its full revenue potential without effective distribution. Producers should have the capability of concluding distribution arrangements if they are not already in place when the investment is offered to the public.

—After the costs of expenditure, distribution and promotion, profit-sharing arrangements should allow investors to receive all net revenues until the full amount of their investment has been recouped. It is customary for investors and the production company to each receive 50 per cent of the net revenues after investors have recouped their expenditures.

Abortion is not a Feminist Issue

Nineteenth century feminists were totally opposed to abortion.
Men are the easy beneficiaries, therefore the major promoters of abortion on demand.
Don't let a minority impose abortion on demand in our country.

Iran's oil flowing at record

TEHRAN (Reuter) — Iran's six oil refineries are producing a record 1.05 million barrels a day, compared with a daily average of 785,000 in the first nine months of the financial year ending in March, Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinfar says.

The official news agency Pars reported that Moinfar told a news conference the increase has been achieved by starting production at a refinery at Isfahan and higher output at the other five refineries.

The Isfahan refinery, which became operative last month, has a capacity of 100,000 barrels a day and is currently producing 80,000, Moinfar said.

His statement came after a countrywide shortages of paraffin, used to heat almost all homes in the country.

Officials have blamed hoarding for the shortages but Moinfar has admitted that pipeline explosions also have had an impact.

Moinfar had said earlier that Iran was producing at least three million barrels of oil a day and that about two million were being sold to foreign companies under contract.

Hostage captors relax their militant stand

Times News Services

The militants at the besieged U.S. Embassy have modified their rigid stand on the release of the 50 American hostages, saying they will obey Ayatollah Khomeini if he accepts a compromise and orders the captives liberated.

Khomeini has not commented publicly on the formula, proposed by President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, that would require the United States to admit to interfering in Iranian affairs and for an international commission to investigate Iranian complaints against the deposed shah and America's alleged crimes in supporting the deposed monarch.

In another development, President Carter Tuesday night ordered 1,800 Marines and four ships to join U.S. naval forces in the Persian Gulf off Iran. White House press secretary Jody Powell emphasized that Carter's decision was "not related to the hostage situation."

The president is to hold his first news conference in over two months tonight to explain his administration's policies and positions. It was not immediately known if he would announce any compromise that could lead to the hostages' release.

A spokesman for the militants, who have been holding the Americans for 102 days inside the U.S. Embassy, told UPI that if Khomeini accepted Bani-Sadr's formula and ordered them to release the hostages to an international commission, they would follow his command.

Specifics of the formula have not been made public, but it is based partly on a formula set forth by U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim for an investigative commission. Waldheim reportedly is involved in "delicate" negotiations related to the compromise.

Tehran Radio, in a broadcast monitored today by the BBC, said that an earlier message from the the ailing Khomeini which referred to his "last days" on earth had worried Iranians.

To assuage such fears, the radio said, the Islamic leader in a later statement made from his sickbed at a Tehran hospital assured his public, "My condition, thanks be to Allah, is improving, and I thank my doctors."

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh has said the international investigating team would meet within the week in Tehran.

Ghotbezadeh has flown to Athens for a two-day official visit to Greece, the first European trip by an Iranian official since the overthrow of the shah a year ago. He refused to answer questions from journalists at Athens airport, saying "I am going to see you later at a press conference.

Washington Monday rejected Bani-Sadr's call for the United States to admit its alleged guilt.

Meanwhile, a group of 49 Americans, on a private visit to Iran at the invitation of Moslem militants holding the U.S. Embassy, have blamed the western media in general and American reporters specifically for the continuing hostage crisis.

Spokesman Norman Forer, a Kansas University professor, told a news conference Wednesday that inaccurate reporting of events in Iran has prolonged the captivity of the hostages and blocked negotiations aimed at their release.

"We're not here to waltz with anybody or make love," he said. "We have presented the students with a graphic perception of the views of the U.S. people on the hostage crisis in return for their views on U.S. foreign policy."

GM cars probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reported today it is investigating possible defects in about 600,000 General Motors automobiles.

The agency said it has received reports of engine stallings in 1980 X-body compact models and of problems with the manual gear shift on 1976-1980 model Chevrolet Chevettes.

The investigation could possibly lead to a recall of about 400,000 Chevettes and about 200,000 X-bodies, including Chevrolet Citation, Oldsmobile Omega, Buick Skylark and Pontiac Phoenix automobiles.

The agency said there may be a sudden loss of control when the Chevette is shifted to a lower gear to slow down.

The gear shift lever may also bind, feel extremely loose or may separate from the transmission entirely, although the vehicle may remain driveable, it said.

The fish don't have a chance

By PAT DUFOUR

The 88-metre Polish fishing vessel Humbak doesn't look much as she sits in the Esquimalt Graving Dock for repairs to her rudder and steering mechanism.

Only nine years old, her hull is weather-worn — harsh evidence that she and her sister ships normally work two years at a stretch before going into port for a paint-up.

But once aboard, the impression changes.

This is truly a workhorse, fitted with all the sophisticated electronics to make fishing the oceans of the world an economic viability.

At the stern of the bridge, overlooking the belly of the ship, are panels of instruments that control the raising of huge nets.

In the bow of the bridge, the electronic gear includes three Polish-made radar sets and three West German and two Polish echo sounders for scanning the ocean bottom.

Humbak is one of seven such vessels of one state-owned company that fish in this part of the world. They have a mother ship that stands by to provide supplies and take their catches.

Her master, Capt. Zanusz Skapski and his crew of 77, were flown from Warsaw in January by the Polish airline LOT to Vancouver to relieve the former crew.

The Humbak makes Vancouver her normal port-of-call for rest-and-recreation visits.

Skapski explains crews spend six months aboard and are then flown back to Poland for three months' leave.

Like the ship, Skapski and his crew are all business on the job. At 46, Skapski has been at sea for 27 years. He had his first command at 25, fishing first in the Baltic Sea, then the North Sea, West Africa and the Antarctic. This is his first visit to these parts.

One of the busjest men aboard Humbak during her stay in dock is chief engineer Stefan Zelobowski. The Humbak has about 900 tons of fileted fish aboard, as well as 120 tons of fishmeal. Because the ship's electrical current is not compatible with that onshore, he has to make sure his refrigeration equipment keeps working.

Skapski and his crew are delighted they have been sent here. They are paid on a percentage basis.

"With good fishing and good weather it's very good for me and the crew," he says.

At sea the deckhands and refrigeration workers work 12-hour shifts, the engineroom hands working in three shifts. Films, television and a library of 600 books help fill their leisure hours.

Skapski says the mother ship keeps them supplied with meat and vegetables. Pork, he says, is the favorite food in Poland, fish coming second.

He says it's rare for a Polish ship to be allowed to have work done in a foreign shipyard because of the high costs. The steering problem, however, had to be corrected.

The Humbak is due to leave Thursday on a seven-day journey to the Bering Sea.

Zelobowski has no illusions about what's ahead.

"There, it is heavy weather and sometimes hard to go to shelter for ice removal," he says.

The electronics and the men aboard Humbak are ready for the challenge.

Witch-hunt ruled out on teachers

Teacher competence is a concern but B.C. schools are not riddled with incompetence and a witch-hunt "clearly isn't needed," Education Minister Brian Smith said Tuesday.

The minister was reacting to the Greater Victoria School Board decision to review methods of rating teachers, with a view to weeding out the bad ones.

Smith said the teaching profession watches itself.

"Those few who are incompetent are weeded out of that profession as they are in others.

"I expect there will continue to be full co-operation from the B.C. Teachers Federation in improving standards."

The minister believes it is no coincidence the "hue and cry over teacher competence arises every time there is a drop in school population."

Nevertheless he intends to hold meetings with the deans of education in B.C.'s three universities within the next month, "because I know they are extremely concerned with the question of competence.

"But you have to approach this on a rational, professional basis, not go around looking for victims."

Greater Victoria Teachers Association president Trevor Calkins says teachers do not object to evaluation as long as a positive attitude is taken.

Voting down locally but up in other areas

Voting in the three-day advance poll in the Victoria and Esquimalt-Saanich ridings was down slightly from the turnout for the advance poll last year, but it doesn't appear to be a trend.

In three Vancouver ridings and three ridings up Island, voter turnouts were heavier. Vancouver Centre recorded a much lighter turnout than the year before.

In Esquimalt-Saanich, this year's turnout was 2,192, down from last year's 2,300.

$30,000 loss in fire

A snack of deep-fried potatoes led to a $30,000 house fire in Oak Bay Tuesday night.

Teenage brothers Tom and Ron Hawker, 3515 Redwood, forgot to remove the pot of cooking oil from the stove when they went out for the evening at 7 p.m.

About an hour later, a neighbor spotted smoke and flames coming out of a vent at the side of the house.

By the time firemen arrived the kitchen was gutted and the blaze had spread into the floor of a bedroom above and the joists over the living room.

The owner of the house, William Hawker, was in Vancouver on holidays.

While firemen were fighting that fire another alarm came in that a pot of fat had ignited in an apartment at Marion Gardens, Fort and Foul Bay.

The fire was extinguished by tenants in the senior citizen complex.

Fire Chief Fred Leeke said Mrs. Charles Adsett suffered burns to her leg removing the pot from the stove. She was treated at Royal Jubilee Hospital and later released.

$2M upgrade

Work will begin next month on a $2 million improvement project at the Departure Bay ferry terminal in Nanaimo, Highways Minister Alex Fraser said Tuesday.

Rent control extension sought by rentalsman

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Alarming rent increases in Vancouver have forced rentalsman Jim Patterson to ask the provincial government to extend rent controls to a large segment of previously unprotected houses and apartments.

Patterson said today the problem is most serious where landlords don't fall under the seven per cent rent ceiling — about 20 per cent of units.

But he said violations are occurring in other areas and his office will start prosecuting landlords who think the rental unit shortage means they can get away with illegal increases.

A spokesman for the Victoria rentalsman office said gouging has not been a problem here — yet.

The other 80 per cent of the market is protected by the limit and can appeal illegal increases to the Rent Review Commission.

The Victoria spokesman said the area suffered a rash of rent increases in the $100 range last October-November as new apartment owners tried to recover high construction costs.

And tenants here are questioning increases much more now than they have in the past, he said.

The Victoria office receives four or five letters a day and a number of phone calls from tenants asking if their rent increases are allowable.

Patterson said the severe shortage of apartments is tempting some landlords to increase rents to unacceptable levels.

"They are in the minority, but even a minority of landlords can cause a lot of problems if they have large holdings," he said.

Those landlords think that if they get caught all they'll be asked to do is roll the rent back.

Violators will be prosecuted under the Summary Convictions Act and are liable to a maximum $500 fine for each month of illegal rent on every unit in the building.

Under the present structure, tenants of exempt units have no protection and in some cases the violation is quite flagrant, he said.

The government must realize the marketplace has changed significantly since the present structure was implemented, Patterson said.

At that time there was a surplus of accommodation.

Flu bug starts its run

It's official: influenza has hit British Columbia and it's a Type B strain similar to the one that has hit epidemic proportions in Washington.

Greater Victoria School Board officials said today absenteeism is up slightly over the average for this time of year, but there is nothing that could be termed alarming.

In a bad news-good news vein, Capital Regional District health officer Dr. A.S. Arneil said he and provincial virologist Dr. Don Kettyls agree there will be only spotty outbreaks of the virus.

"It's always dangerous to predict these things," Arneil said, "but we think it's going to hit in selected areas."

He explained that last year there was both Type A and Type B flu viruses around.

There were only spotty outbreaks of the Type B flu (which hits more people more quickly than Type A but with less severe effects) late last winter and early spring, so there should be many people with some immunity.

Arneil again warned that anyone who gets the flu should go to bed and take liquids.

Cablevision fees up for additional outlets

Victoria Cablevision fees jumped 50 cents last month for some subscribers with extra outlets.

Company manager Len Charlish said notice of the increase was given but because of the bi-monthly billing system, some subscribers forgot it was coming.

Half the subscribers are billed one month, the remaining half in the following month.

The extra charge applies to subscribers with one or more additional cable outlets and is on top of the basic cable charge of $5.25 per month.

The 50-cent hike means that multiple outlet subscribers now pay $2 per extra outlet.

Charlish said Cablevision's basic fee is the cheapest in the country. The current rate has been in effect since 1976 and he foresees no change until next year.

Additional TV cable outlets are commonplace but Charlish could not say how many residential subscribers actually pay the additional charge.

There are 23,000 multiple outlets in such commercial buildings as hotels, apartments and department stores.

Charlish said when an illegal outlet is discovered by the firm, the subscriber is given the option of disconnecting it, having the charge applied to his bill or going to court.

He said Section 287 of the Criminal Code allows for a penalty of up to two years in jail for theft of telecommunications service.

Trident open house, free flip on Saturday

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Trident Aircraft Ltd. is mounting one last campaign for public support before the federal election by staging an open house at its hangar in Sidney this Saturday.

A flight for two around Victoria and the Gulf Islands is being offered as a door prize for the affair.

The open house, from noon to 5 p.m., is sponsored by former Trident employees and local merchants.

Derek Young, the company's former manager of production control and one of 107 people laid off in January when federal financing was suspended, said Trident wants to try one more time to put across its case to the public.

The open house is also intended to spotlight the job opportunities in the aircraft industry for young people if Trident can get off the ground again with its Trigull amphibious plane.

While Victorians have supported the company, Young said in an interview, many people — even some Trident employees — do not understand the company's requirements and how the aircraft industry works.

"If it's good then why do you need government financing?" they ask, Young said.

"It gets a little upsetting when someone like Don Munro says 'I've immersed myself in it for two days and I know all about it.' People who've been in the aircraft industry for years still don't know what it's all about.

"You can't start an aircraft company like you start a corner store," he said.

A company like Trident requires huge amounts of capital before any aircraft are produced. The manufacturing process is complicated and requires federal inspection at every stage.

Voluminous records must be kept on every part that goes into each plane. Trident has to meet the same quality control standards that apply to companies like Boeing or Canadair which have thousands of employees.

"Manufacturing procedures are so closely controlled and so complex it requires skills available in very few parts of the world."

The crew Trident assembled — still largely intact and waiting for the word to return to work — has more than 1,800 years of combined aircraft manufacturing experience, Young said.

Local young people just coming out of school would be taken on by Trident under apprenticeship programs, which are scarce these days for Victoria high school graduates.

The Trigull is a labor intensive product, "exactly what people talk about when they say we need high technology industries here."

Supporters of the Tory government's decision to cut off $4 million federal funding for Trident forget about the contribution Trident would make in the other direction.

In full production 270 people would be employed, with a payroll estimated conservatively at $5 million a year. Goods and services totalling $3 million a year woyuld be purchased locally, while Canadian subcontractors and suppliers would get a further $5 million in business.

The Canadian and B.C. income tax alone paid by Trident employees would amount to $1.75 million a year.

The company concedes the validity of a report which says several hundred Trigulls would have to be sold before the company turns a profit, but Young said the federal government should take a direct equity position in the Trident, as it did with Canadair and de Havilland, now both successful companies.

No ticket, no entry, no bus

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. — Tickets to the Winter Olympics are going anywhere from $10 to $10,000, but no matter what price a tourist pays, one thing is for certain — he won't even get into this winter playground without one.

A $10 ticket gets a spectator through the gate only long enough to watch athletes train before their event. A $10,000 fee buys a gold card, an entry to all events during the two-week sports spectacular.

In between, visitors are plunking down from $20 to $60 per event at authorized ticket outlets and much more to scalpers and tour operators who hadn't sold out by Tuesday.

On the back of the Olympic ticket is a warning that it may not be resold or offered for resale at a premium in excess of the amount allowed by any federal, state or local law or regulation. New York state law, which outlaws scalping, is applicable only in cities. Lake Placid is a village.

Organizers said 550,000 tickets were printed and about 20 per cent remained unsold today.

After the Games officially open today, a person cannot get on a bus or train from outlying areas to the village without holding a ticket or a ticket order confirmation slip. And if would-be spectators drive, they will be turned back at checkpoints. Vehicles without special permits are not allowed inside Lake Placid for the duration of the Olympics.

Buses won't accept passengers who don't have a ticket or one reserved by telephone on American Express only.

Outside an Olympic ticket office, an entrepreneur carried a legal pad listing what tickets to which events he still had on hand. Some were offered at face value. Others for the more-popular hockey and skating shows carried sky-high prices. "I would have to get $95 for that hockey event. That's what I paid for it," said a woman with a pair of tickets to sell. Regulation cost for the playoffs ran $20-$60. "I've heard of some going for over $200," the woman said.

Inside the Olympic office there was almost as much confusion as out-of-towners tried to redeem computerized confirmation coupons. Some were told to come back later. But how they were to get into the village they didn't know.

With the intricate transportation system once again an admitted "flop," organizers scrambled to get desperately needed buses into town and running.

On the first day of Olympic competition, hundreds of spectators and others faced waits of 1½ hours or more for buses that are supposed to be running every 15 minutes.

On Monday, there were similar long delays. The delays then mainly affected the thousands of reporters in the area and some residents.

"It was a flop," declared Ed Lewi, spokesman for the organizing committee.

Organizers claimed they had 243 of the 300 buses they needed in town on Tuesday. But judging from the frequency of buses winding their way around town, there seemed to be far fewer actually running.

The breakdowns in the transportation system stem from a labor dispute over the use of Canadian drivers on buses supplied by Canadian firms. The dispute was reportedly ironed out when 40 Canadian drivers were given work permits.

An elaborate bus system was set up because this little village, with only one traffic light and nar)ow streets, could never have coped with tens of thousands of cars jamming its streets.

In tandem with the bus system, extremely tight restrictions were imposed on the use of cars. Only a small proportion — about 1,800 — of the 21,000 journalists, Olympics officials and support personnel in town have special permits allowing them to drive a car around.

Spectators who drive to the Games have to leave their cars in parking lots 16 miles or more from the Olympic sites, and then hop a bus into town.

In face of a flood of complaints, Lewi offered to travel some of the bus routes to assess the situation. At a motel about 10 miles from here, Lewi and a group of Yugoslavian journalists ended up waiting nearly 2½ hours for a bus that never came. Finally, Lewi's wife Maureen drove some of the reporters into town. Taxis were dispatched to pick up the rest.

Meanwhile, the good news is that the IOC decided to admit three Mongolian athletes who missed the deadline for applications. The athletes had been refused admission to the Olympic Village earlier this week because their Olympic committee missed the deadline.

Carter turns on pressure

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) - The Olympic Games are officially on in Moscow next summer but President Carter is urging the United States Olympic Committee to pull out.

Within an hour of a statement from the International Olympic Committee Tuesday night rejecting Carter's call to move the Games because of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, the White House turned the pressure on American Olympic officials.

Jody Powell, White House press secretary, issued this statement:

"We regret the decision of the IOC to conduct the 1980 Summer Olympic Games in Moscow and to reject the proposal of the U.S. Olympic Committee to transfer, postpone or cancel the Games. Under the circumstances, neither the president, the Congress, nor the American people can support the sending of the United States team to Moscow this summer.

"The President urges the U.S. Olympic Committee to reach a prompt decision against sending teams to the Games."

The U.S. committee has until May 24 — the date when entries must be submitted to Moscow — to decide whether to go.

Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, read a 700-word statement to a news conference after a two-day debate by the ruling body of the Games, and announced that the Moscow Games were on. The statement said the IOC has an agreement with Moscow and an obligation to the young athletes of the world.

It added that national Olympic committees have to make a decision on whether to go to Moscow, and hoped that as many as possible would be there.

USOC president Robert Kane has said he personally opposes any kind of boycott of the Games.

Kane appeared before the IOC this week and presented Carter's case for moving the Games. He argued that by its military intervention in Afghanistan the Soviet Union had made Moscow an unsuitable place for holding a sports festival designed to promote peace and international friendship.

Killanin said the IOC decided unanimously that the Games, due to start July 19, must go on in Moscow. He said the 73 members present all supported the decision, including the two U.S. members, Douglas F. Roby and Julian K. Roosevelt.

The IOC, which has 89 members in all, is a law unto itself. It has sole responsibility for running the Games and chooses its own members as individuals, to act as its ambassadors in their countries.

Killanin's statement stressed that Moscow has breached no IOC rules. He said he could see no possibility of the Games being moved to another country unless the agreement was broken.

Asked by a reporter what would happen if the Soviets went beyond Afghanistan and invaded somewhere else, Killanin replied : "If they went any further, I think you would find yourself in a cataclysm and a third world war."

Roby, 80-year-old long serving U.S. member on the IOC, said both he and Roosevelt agree with the IOC's decision. Roby said: "I think it's the best thing we can do right now and under these circumstances. If the situation changed, I might change my position also."

IT'S A TIGHT SQUEEZE for Canada's Paul MacLean as he fights way through goal crease after clubmate Terry O'Malley had scored final goal in 10-1 victory by Canadians over The Netherlands in Olympic hockey competition Tuesday. Canadians find range in opener

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (CP) — Dan D'Alvise concedes he has had trouble finding the range of late.

"But maybe I'm like a good racehorse and peak for the big ones," the 24-year-old University of Toronto student said after breaking out of his slump with two goals Tuesday to help carry Canada to a 10-1 thrashing of the Netherlands in the opening game for both clubs at the 1980 Winter Olympics.

D'Alvise wasn't the only Canadian scorer to emerge from a scoring drought. Left winger Ken Berry scored three times, including the winner at 11:40 of the first period and a pair of third-period efforts 71 seconds apart.

After a listless first period in which Canada managed to escape with a 2-1 lead, the Canadian squad — returning to Olympic hockey after failing to field a team at the last two Winter Games — got its offence untracked with two goals in the second period and added a six-goal barrage in the third.

D'Alvise, who centred Canada's fourth line, said the team was intent on scoring as many goals as possible because if two teams end the round-robin competition in a tie, a complicated goals-for and goals-against quotient is employed.

Kevin Primeau, Dave Hindmarch, Glenn Anderson, John Davaney and 39-year-old defenceman Terry O'Malley accounted for the other Canadian goals as the youthful squad, whose average age is less than 23, tested a beleaguered Ted Lenssen in the Dutch goal with 40 shots. Bob Dupuis, his Canadian counterpart, handled 19. Corky De Graauw's shorthanded goal, after just 1:56 of play, was the only one to elude him.

"We were very scared on the bench as to what might happen to our morale," said Lorne Davis, one of three Canadian coaches, of the quick Dutch goal. "But it was really gratifying to see them turn it around. I think our superior conditioning and the youth of our team started to show as the game wore on."

In other opening-day action in the Red Division, Poland withstood a last-minute penalty to hold on for a 5-4 upset win over Finland. The Finns appealed the curvature of Andrzej Ujwary's stick and their suspicions were rewarded with a minor penalty to the Pole for having an excessive curve in his blade. However, Poland, which got two goals from Andrzej Zabawa, held off Finland's last-ditch power play.

Alexander Golikov scored three goals as the Soviet Union humbled Japan 16-0. The Russians held period leads of 8-0 and 13-0, and outshot their outclassed opponents 67-17.

Meanwhile in the Blue Division of the 12-team tournament, the United States got a goal from defenceman Bill Baker with 27 seconds remaining and goaltender Jim Craig on the bench in favor of an extra skater to earn a 2-2 tie with Sweden.

The Stastny brothers accounted for four goals as Czechoslovakia humbled Norway 11-0 and Romania overcame a 4-2 to beat West Germany 6-4.

"That's the first time we've scored 10 goals," said Clare Drake, who shares the Canadian coaching duties with Davis and Tom Watt. "One of the knocks against our club has been that we've had trouble scoring on the big ice surface. Now we've proven we can do it."

The loss by Finland enhances Canada's chances of advancing to the medal round of competition which will involve the top two finishers in each division. With the Soviet Union considered a sure bet to finish first in the Red Division, the second berth in the final round was expected to be decided Saturday when Canada tangles with Finland. Poland's surprise win may have changed all that.

The East Germans return with the 1976 gold medal winners in both men's events and are expected to continue their dominance through the next four days at Mt. Van Hoevenberg. Medals will be awarded Saturday and the doubles — a two-run event for men only — is Feb. 19.

Veteran gives Tim a shot for Brier title at Calgary

By BILL WALKER

So Timmy Horrigan has made it to the Brier! That's all right and really no big surprise to those who know him.

Tim's always been "right there", as they say in the trade, and now all his well wishers will be wishing him better still at Calgary next month as many did at Labatts' reception at Victoria Curling Club, Monday.

He is one of several fine young skips of many fine young rinks in the Victoria area. And give him further marks. He expounded on the quality of Island curling himself when he won the Pacific Coast Curling Association championship a week ago before taking the Labatts B.C. Tankard at New Westminster, Sunday.

"This could be the start of something new" he said after his PCCA victory, the first for the Island since Dave Patterson of Comox turned the trick in 1967. "There are a lot of good, young rinks on the Island on their way up," he said. Then last weekend he went out, a la Joe Namath, predicted a victory in the provincial eight-rink final, and, along with his rink, made it stick, and with class.

It will be the second appearance in the Brier for a Victoria rink and the first in 22 years. Tony Gutoski represented the city in 1958.

Veteran broadcaster and curling authority Bill Good of Vancouver put it in perspective of Horrigan when he said: "It may not be absolutely correct to call Tim Horrigan cocky, but it can be safely said he doesn't suffer from a lack of confidence in his own ability and that of his rink either."

Good also noted that, although he's not used to making any rash predictions about curling because it's a slippery game that's played on ice where anything can happen, "if Horrigan and his rink play in the Brier as they played in New Westminster, then on any given day they can beat any other rink in Canada. They have a chance."

Good cautioned, however, that the Brier, March 2-9, is a different sort of game. "There will six or seven skips and rinks who have been there before and that is always an edge in a national final," he warned.

"But I was impressed," he added, "by the rink, on and off the ice, and Victoria Club should feel proud of its representatives."

In the final game against Gary Sigurdson, Horrigan was almost perfect as he curled a remarkable 95.8 per cent and the team turned in an over 90 per cent performance. Commenting on that fact, veteran Keith Dagg said: "That's amazing. Do that and it will win anywhere."

However, it's not that Horrigan really is invincible. Confident as he is, he knows he is not unbeatable.

He was second behind champion Steve Skillings and his rink in the Harley Davidson Series of Curling this season, lost to Al Frame of the Racquet Club in the South Island zone final and to Brad Clarke in the Island bronze tankard competition before pouring it on in New West.

And I'm sure he remembered too that when Frame went up to shake his hand Monday, that the last four times these skips had met in competition, Frame had won three.

But that's curling, and when you're hot, you're hot, as Tim is now. It shouldn't pass either that if Horrigan hadn't made the men's final, he would have been in the Island mixed showdown. He had a berth in that event and, as it was, his rink, skipped by second Murray Walker, went to the final before bowing to Alberni's Fred Duncan.

Horrigan, who will celebrate his 29th birthday on Feb. 25, has been around and often close.

He started curling when he was 11 in his native Calgary. He won a high school Island playoff berth in 1969, captured his first Island men's zone berth eight years ago, was twice in the PCCA finals before this year and represented the Island in the B.C. mixed final two years ago.

Tim classifies himself as a part-time icemaker and, as employment opportunities haven't been that brisk lately, he can spare the time at the Brier before embarking on a sports promotional proposition in April.

Also with time on their hands are two other members of the rink. Third Lowell Goulden, 29, a photographer, who came here from Nova Scotia where he skipped that province's mixed rink last year and played lead for Allan Darraugh in the '78 Brier at Vancouver, is also temporarily without work, while lead Dave Smith, 35, a commercial fishermen, also just happens to be between seasons.

Second Kelly Horrigan, who will celebrate his 20th birthday on March 2, opening day of the Brier, is the only employed member in the party. He is a driver-salesman for a commercial firm.

It is reported too that when asked at New Westminter "what do you guys do?" Kelly quipped: "Oh, we're the UIC reps" and the remark went right over the head of the interviewer.

Oddly enough, Goulden and Smith, who also play out of Juan de Fuca, have been together before. It was in Nova Scotia. "We entered three bonspiels and won all three," Goulden recalled. "Then Dave headed for Victoria."

And, for the figure filberts, how's this?

B.C.'s first Brier winner was skipped by Frenchy D'Amour of Trail in 1948. Sixteen years later B.C. won its second national championship with the late Lyall Dagg in 1964. Now it's 16 years later. Again.

Happy Brier reps: Tim Horrigan, Lowell Goulden, Kelly Horrigan, Dave Smith

Facelift for Green

Wouldn't it be great to have a major ski area a little closer to the southern end of Vancouver Island?

Right now we're faced with three to four hours of driving each way to ski any of the three areas with reasonable access on the Island — Mt. Arrowsmith near Port Alberni or Forbidden Plateau and Mt. Washington near Courtenay.

Sure, there are a few fanatics (present company included) who will make the trip in a day. But, realistically, the jaunt involves at least one overnight stay.

I remember vividly the joy of skiing Snow Valley at Fernie and North Star at Kimberley where the slopes are a mere five minutes away from the towns.

The closest existing area to the major population centres of Vancouver Island is Nanaimo's Green Mountain. The drive there takes about two and a half hours, with the last section of road in extremely rough condition and not really suitable for cars.

It is this factor that is holding back development at Green, which has the potential both in terms of skiing terrain and aesthetics to become great.

Green will lose most of its close-knit friendly appeal by developing, but appears in real danger of dying unless it expands to attract more people — those without four-wheel-drive vehicles.

The Sno Birds Lift Society has already made a start.

They have submitted an application for funding under the federal-provincial Travel Industry Development Subsidiary Agreement (TIDSA).

In addition, they have identified and flagged another access route up the other side of the mountain with a grade of about eight per cent which would cut eight miles and about half an hour off the trip from Victoria.

MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., which holds the land through which the new access passes, has been highly co-operative with the ski organization.

But there is a slight problem. Approximately 3.2 miles of road needs to be built to connect the Mac and Blo road with the top part of the present route. Engineering surveys indicate this short segment will cost in the vicinity of $680,000.

As the Sno Birds' presentation to TIDSA points out:

"Located in the province's largest unserved ski market area, the mountain's potential has been dormant for one reason — access."

Construction of the new access "will unlock the area's potential, facilitating expansion of facilities, relocation of the base area and the development of a major alpine recreation area."

Impressive is the only way to describe the potential of Green.

The present maximum vertical distance served by the two T-bars is 850 feet while the potential vertical is around 1,900 feet, which compares quite favorably with any of the major areas in British Columbia.

In terms of slope area, the present figure is 238 hactares while the potential is 440 hectares.

The major facilities needed to reach this potential, aside from the all-important access route, are a 5,000-foot chair lift, a new day lodge and facilities and a new T-bar.

Completely refurbishing the area would cost in the vicinity of $3.5 million and overtures have already been received from the private sector to supply funding after a master plan has been developed.

Part of the criteria for collecting funds from TIDSA hinges on whether or not the area has a potential for attracting skiers on a regional rather than a local basis.

Rental records at Green indicate 39 per cent of the skiiers come from the Greater Victoria area, 28 per cent from the Cowichan Valley and the balance from Nanaimo.

Green does attract skiers from outside the Nanaimo-Ladysmith area.

The communities of Port Alberni and Courtenay have backed the other three Island areas to the hilt. This support, coupled with a plentiful snowfall this season, is now paying off.

So, why can't the communities from Nanaimo to Victoria get behind the relatively-close development at Green?

As we've seen this season, the new development at Mt. Washington has enhanced rather than detracted from attendance at both Forbidden and Arrowsmith.

In a similar fashion, upgrading Green Mountain could only help boost the wintertime tourist attraction of Vancouver Island.

Cougars break loose

Victoria Cougars, playing before the smallest crowd of the season, shook off some early problems and then went on to crush Seattle Breakers 9-2 in a Western Hockey League game Tuesday at Memorial Arena.

Only 1,740 fans turned out for the game in which the Cougars took period leads of 2-0 and 4-1 en route to their 38th win in 53 starts.

The victory boosted Victoria to within three points of first-place Portland Winter Hawks in the Western Division.

Captain Mark Robinson led the scoring parade for Cougars with four points on the only power-play goal of the game and three assists.

Centre Barry Pederson also enjoyed a good night with a shorthanded goal and two assists to push his point total for the season to 106 and third place in the league scoring race.

Cougars now face Medicine Hat Tigers in an 8:30 p.m. game Saturday at Memorial Arena.

In other games, Calgary Wranglers stretched their lead to four points over Regina atop the Eastern Division, by edging Lethbridge Broncos 5-4 on Clint Fehr's goal at 4:37 of overtime in Calgary and New Westminster Bruins racked up a misconduct and three-game misconducts as they fought their way to their 14th consecutive loss, bowing 10-4 to Saskatoon Blades in Saskatoon.

Roger Wolfe, Dave Barr, Mike Moller and Doug Morrison replied for Lethbridge, which ended the evening tied for fourth spot in the east division with Billings Bighorns.

Bruins, now with nine points for the season and only two losses short of the 1967 Calgary Buffaloes' record of 16 straight defeats, gave the Saskatoon fans a typically rough show.

Coaches Jerome Engele of Saskatoon and Tracy Pratt of New Westminster were ejected in the second period after a heated argument. Bruins' general manager Bill Shinske was tossed out in the third period for failing to have players go out for a faceoff.

Bruins took 13 of 21 minor penalties, six of 11 majors, all three game misconducts and the lone misconduct.

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs have acquired defenceman Richard Mulhern from Los Angeles Kings for an undisclosed amount of cash.

Gamble pays for Canucks

Times News Services

A final-period gamble paid off 11 seconds before the end of the game when Harold Snepsts scored a goal for Vancouver Canucks, tying their game against Hartford Whalers 5-5 at Hartford in National Hockey League action Tuesday.

Vancouver had pulled goaltender Gary Bromley off the ice for an extra attacker in an effort to salvage the tie and it worked.

The Canucks and the Whalers entered the third period tied 3-3 but the Canucks took a lead on Darcy Rota's goal. Blaine Stoughton scored his second goal of the night to even the score again, and Pat Boutette put the Whalers ahead 5-4 with a little more than two minutes left.

In the second period, Hartford's Tim Sheehy scored his first NHL goal and Ivan Boldirev's power-play backhand shot slid past Whalers goaltender Al Smith to make the score 3-1 for Vancouver. Power-play goals by Boutette and Stoughton tied the score for Hartford in that period.

In other NHL games, Washington Capitals whipped Los Angeles Kings 5-2 and Winnipeg Jets and New York Islanders skated to a scoreless tie.

It wasn't pleasant for the Kings. The loss was the club's seventh in its last eight outings and fourth in a row at the Forum.

Ryan Walter fired in his 16th and 17th goals of the season to lead Washington to the victory. His second goal of the night on a power play touched off a three-goal outburst in the second period that put the Capitals ahead 4-2.

Rob Palmer and Charlie Simmer scored for Los Angeles.

Markus Mattsson earned then shutout for the Jets — their first in NHL history — with 20 stops.

Glenn Resch turned aside 27 shot in the second scoreless tie in the Islanders' eight-year history.

Braves romp

Front-running Saanich Braves hammered cellar-dwelling Esquimalt Legion 16-1 in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Tuesday at Pearkes Arena.

Ian McLean led the scorefest with four goals, Marty Irvine and Jim Michaels each fired three, Dave Robbins added two and singles came from Don McKay, Shawn Connors, Jamie Bowes and Brian Goodwin. Brian Orr averted a shutout for Esquimalt.

Goaltender Bill Geddie of Esquimalt was suffering from shell-shock after facing 73 shots while Marty Wakelyn of Saanich only had to face 17.

Forest makes history, by gaining third final

LONDON (Reuter) — Nottingham Forest, the defender, won its way into an unprecedented third successive final when it beat Liverpool in the semi-final of England's Football League Cup at Liverpool Tuesday.

The second leg finished 1-1, leaving Forest 2-1 aggregate winner on the late penalty goal it had snatched in its home leg.

John Robertson again doomed Liverpool, the league champion, from the penalty spot — this time midway through the first half — after goalkeeper Ray Clemence fouled Martin O'Neill.

Liverpool sent on David Fairclough, dropped after scoring three goals on Saturday, in his familiar role as substitute but though he scored a goal in injury time the Forest defence stood firm.

Forest has won the cup the last two years, beating first Liverpool, then Southampton in the final. This time Forest will face Wolverhampton at Wembley.

Goals from ex-England striker John Richards and Mel Eves dampened Swindon's hopes of a Wembley appearance.

Captain Ray McHale gave Swindon a lift with a 64th-minute penalty shot, but 10 minutes later Richards scored again and Wolverhampton held on for a 4-3 aggregate win.

Liz the Whiz leaves Streak

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Women's Basketball League scoring leader Liz (the Whiz) Silcott of Montreal has been traded by St. Louis Streak to San Francisco Pioneers.

Streak owner Vince Gennaro announced the trade of Silcott, 29, who was suspended three days earlier after contacting California Dreams, another WBL team.

Silcott, who denied the contact with California was for trade purposes, had been averaging 33 points, helping St. Louis to a 14-5 record.

Pact brings harmony to Western Speedway

Peace has descended on Western Speedway.

Officials of Western Speedway, the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association and the Capital City Auto Racing Club have struck an accord and formed a board of directors to govern competition at the Langford oval during the 1980 racing season.

The two major factions, Western and VITRA, were unable to reach an agreement on a contract last season and after a brief attempt at racing in Langford, the drivers' organization pulled out and raced the remainder of the campaign at Nanaimo.

The Capital City Club was started late last season by drivers who didn't agree with the VITRA boycott of Western.

Representatives on the new board are VITRA president Bill Price, VITRA directors Jim Caudwell and Joe Macmurchie, Speedway manager Tony Mortel, Speedway treasurer Lawrence Fox, Speedway announcer Ross Phillips, Larry and Earl Pollard and Stu Taylor of Capital City and George Kormandy (representing stock cars), Joe Greff (jalopies) and Ross Rockett (oldtimers).

The Speedway season will open May 3 with stock car, jalopy and super-stock racing.

Practice sessions are scheduled for April 20, 24 and 27 as well as May 1.

AUTOPLAN '80
Autoplan 1980
DON'T JUST RENEW IT. REVIEW IT!
YOUR Autoplan insurance coverage should fit your needs, your situation. That's why we're offering you a wider choice of low-cost insurance options this year than ever before. So don't just renew the same coverage automatically. Ask your Autoplan agent about useful options like these:

1 OPTIONAL UNDER-INSURED MOTORIST COVERAGE.
For $12.00 you can now extend your protection to cover the situation when the person who is at fault does not have enough insurance to cover your claim for injury or death. If you are the victim of such an accident, and you carry this optional coverage, your own coverage can be applied to bring the total payment to the higher limit.

2 OPTIONAL SUPPLEMENTARY NO-FAULT BENEFITS.
If for any reason you feel that the current no-fault benefits (medical, disability, death and funeral benefits) are insufficient to cover your needs, this option allows you to buy higher levels of benefits for a small additional premium.

3 OPTIONAL SUBSTITUTE VEHICLE COVERAGE.
This additional insurance covers the cost of a replacement vehicle for your use in the event that your own vehicle is in an accident and cannot be driven.

The deadline is February 29, 1980.
Review early.

Braves in front

Belmont Braves took prompt advantage of opponents' fouls Tuesday night to bounce Mt. Douglas Rams 77-73 and take over sole possession of first place in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' "AA" Basketball League.

In other games, Victoria Totems trampled winless Spectrum 80-35 and Oak Bay Bays defeated Parkland Panthers, 62-58.

Rams enjoyed a 36-27 lead at half time but Ian Lang, one of their most potent scoring threats fouled out in the fourth quarter. Terry Plewes, another key player, did the same and Belmont rallied for the victory.

Darren Alexander set the pace for Totems with 20 points while Ryan Campbell and Will Reid each contributed 16. Ron Crabbe topped Spectrum with 15.

In Greater Victoria High School Boys' "A" League play, Dunsmuir Demons clinched the top south Island berth in the Vancouver Island finals they will play host to next week by tripping Lambrick Park, 90-58. Mark Richards led the Dunsmuir attack with 18 points.

Kelly Hunter dunked 25 points to spark Parkland to a 65-40 decision over Stelly's Stingers in a Greater Victoria High School Girls' League game.

Financial troubles erase cycle opener

GENEVA (Reuter) — The 1980 motorcycle season's opening Grand Prix championship event in San Carlos, Venezuela, has been cancelled for financial reasons, the International Motorcycle Federation (FIM) has announced.

The season was due to start with the San Carlos races for 125-, 250-, 350- and 500-cc categories on March 23, but it will now begin in Salzburg, Austria on April 27.

The Venezuelan Motorcycle Federation contacted FIM headquarters, the sports governing body, to inform them of the cancellation.

A FIM spokesman said no details were given, but it was assumed the Venezuelan federation had failed to attract sufficient sponsorship.

Kentucky hoop whiz 'Stepping' to record

PHELPS, Ky. (AP) — Ervin Stepp, the Phelps High School senior guard, has all but assured himself of setting a national single season high school basketball scoring record.

Stepp, through 20 games, has scored 1,075 points for a 54.7 points per game average. In two recent games, he scored 75 and 60 points.

Stepp is well ahead of the current over-all record of 50.8 points per game.

Vikes trim visitors

Billy Loos fired 24 points and hauled down 21 rebounds while leading University of Victoria Vikings to a 92-80 victory over Western Washington State in a collegiate men's exhibition basketball game Tuesday at the McKinnon Gymnasium.

Loos scored 20 of his points during the first half as Vikings, who are now 28-5 overall this season, took a 42-36 lead.

Vikings controlled the boards against Washington State, holding a 54-33 advantage in rebounds while shooting an impressive 51 per cent from the floor.

Ted Anderson added 16 points and Reni Dolcetti contributed 14 for UVic while Kevin Bryant led paced the visitors with 23.

Vikings next play a two-game Canada West University Athletic Association series against Calgary Dinosaurs starting Friday in the Alberta city.

The UVic club has already clinched at least a tie for first place with a 14-0 record and another conference title is practically guaranteed.

UVic Vikettes, who are in a similar position in the women's league with a 16-0 record, need only to win once this weekend against the Calgary Dinnies to wrap up the top berth.

Bite-the-bullet choices in '18-cent election'

By NORMA GREENAWAY

There have been promises such as improved pensions, a stronger defence system and some constitutional reform as leaders of the three major parties criss-cross the country seeking votes.

But the election campaign has been fought primarily over the belt-tightening budget of the minority Progressive Conservative government that was defeated in December and that Prime Minister Clark says will be introduced again if he is elected.

Although the Liberals and New Democrats have said the Tories are asking Canadians to bite the bullet too fast and too hard on economic restraint and increased energy prices, they also acknowledge energy prices have to go up and spending must be watched closely.

Of promises that have been made, many were trotted out from last spring's election campaign which saw the defeat of the Liberal government of Pierre Trudeau.

Since the surprise election was called, Clark, Trudeau and New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent have sprinkled the promises to make Canada a better place to live among criticisms of each other.

Broadbent has made more promises than the other two. One estimate says they would cost $6 billion. But Broadbent says the net cost is $1.3 billion, when savings are considered. Clark has said that Liberal policies would increase the deficit by $6 billion.

Energy and economic issues have dominated the campaign, but the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan and the situation in Iran has added a new dimension to the election.

The exercise has even been dubbed by some as the 18-cent election, a reference to the Conservative plan to increase the excise tax on gasoline and diesel fuel by 4.5 cents a litre or 18 cents a gallon.

Clark has defended the proposal as a key ingredient of his program to achieve energy self-sufficiency by 1990. Trudeau and Broadbent have flatly rejected such an increase as an unfair burden on poor and middle-income Canadians.

Some of the issues that marked the May 22 election have had little impact on this one. These include return of capital punishment, abortion, equal rights for women and public service cuts.

Oil pricing

The current price of domestic oil is $14.75 a barrel, compared with a world price of about $32 and still rising. All parties agree the domestic price must increase, but differ on how much and how quickly.

Clark: Increase the domestic price by $4 a barrel this year and $4.50 a barrel from 1981 through 1983. The price would never exceed 85 per cent of the world price so domestic industry would always have a competitive advantage.

Trudeau: The price should be a blend of world price, the cost of producing easy-to-get domestic crude and that of producing expensive oil in the oil sands and in remote areas such as the North. He refuses to estimate the price increase. A new federal agency would be established to advise on the appropriate price.

Broadbent: A commission should be set up to recommend a price to the government by June. That price should reflect the cost of domestic production rather than a cartel-determined price. The multinationals should get no more profits.

Self-sufficiency

Clark: Raise the excise tax on gasoline by 4.5 cents a litre or 18 cents a gallon to encourage conservation as part of a program to achieve energy self-sufficiency by 1990. The excise tax exemption would be removed from farmers, fishermen and transit companies but slightly more than half of the increase would be returned as a rebate to these three. One-third of the excise tax would go towards an energy tax credit to ease the impact on those least able to afford the increase and the rest would go towards paying for oil import subsidies.

Trudeau: Abandon the proposed excise tax increase. Disagrees with the 1990 self-sufficiency target, saying energy security must initially be nailed down by contracts with Venezuela and Mexico.

Broadbent: No increase in the excise tax. Agrees with target of energy self-sufficiency by 1990 and stresses conservation measurs such as lower speed limits and improved bus and train systems as means of achieving goal.

Oil imports

All parties want to reduce dependence on foreign oil.

Clark: Reduce dependence on foreign oil by building two, possibly three new oil sands plants, extend the natural gas pipeline to Quebec City and the Maritimes from Montreal and convert oil-fired electrical generating stations to coal. Encourage development of alternate energy sources such as hydro-electricity and tidal and solar power.

Trudeau: Emphasize conservation, promote new energy development, provide incentives for consumers to switch to natural gas furnaces from oil and extend natural gas pipeline. Set up a new Crown corporation, a subsidiary of the federally-owned Petro-Canada, to take over federal activities in the development of alternate energy sources.

Broadbent: Extend natural gas pipeline, develop alternate energy sources such as coal, offer subsidies to homeowners converting to natural gas furnaces from oil. Revoke the government's decision to approve an increase in natural gas exports to the United States.

Foreign control

All three parties want greater domestic control of the oil and gas industry, now about 75 per cent foreign controlled, and point to Petro-Canada, the government-owned oil company, as a main vehicle in achieving that goal.

Clark: Tax breaks to small Canadian-owned companies to allow them to expand. Reverse original plans to sell Petro-Canada to private interests and have the federal government retain effective control of the Crown corporation by keeping about 30 per cent of its shares. Give away or sell the remaining shares to Canadians. Expand the corporation and allow it to become a major instrument for increased domestic control of the indutry.

Trudeau: Use Petro-Canada, federal land regulations and tax allowances to achieve target of at least 50-per-cent Canadian ownership by 1990. Increase the corporation's involvement in conservation and development of new and alternate energy sources.

Broadbent: Make Petro-Canada the No. 1 oil company in Canada and create a subsidiary to develop the oil sands rather than relying on foreign-owned companies. Open Petro-Canada retail gasoline stations across the country. Strengthen the powers of the Foreign Investment Review Agency to prevent increased foreign ownership.

Offshore oil

Clark: Prepared to give provinces control of offshore oil and gas resources and will seek constitutional amendments to make the change legal.

Trudeau: Ask the Supreme Court of Canada to determine whether the provinces or federal government own offshore resources.

Broadbent: Agrees provinces have the right to their offshore resources but equalization formula should be revamped to reflect the new-found wealth of some provinces.

Defence

Clark: Increase the commitment to NATO by three per cent, increase armed forces personnel of 79,460 by 4,000 over the next four years and make an immediate decision on purchase of fighter aircraft.

Trudeau: Made few specific statements, but says the only sane foreign policy is one dedicated to a stable and just international community. On the Soviet Union, he calls for collective economic sanctions, diplomatic pressures and further initiatives and co-operation with NATO. Endorses purchase of fighter aircraft.

Broadbent: A review of a 1969 party resolution urging withdrawal from the North American Air Defence Command (NORAD) and NATO and a white paper on defence spending before deciding whether to increase military expenditures.

Olympics

Clark: Ask athletes to boycott the Moscow Olympics if Soviet troops are not withdrawn from Afghanistan by Feb. 20 — two days after the election.

Trudeau: Originally opposed boycott but now willing to support idea if a significant block of countries withdraw as part of wider economic sanctions against the Soviet Union.

Broadbent: Wants International Olympic Committee to move the Games out of Moscow but opposes boycott.

Spending

Clark: Stop now the trend towards an increasing federal deficit before it is out of control.

Trudeau: Opposes solving federal deficit problem at the expense of inflation and unemployment. Promotes reducing the deficit in a phased and orderly manner that does not cause undue disruption to the economic system.

Broadbent: Seeks creative federal spending now to help low-income families. The deficit can be a tool to spur new growth and tax revenues to reduce debt within a couple of years.

Constitution

Trudeau: Entrenching minority language rights in the constitution a priority.

Pensions

Trudeau: Increase guaranteed income supplement to the poorest pensioners by $35 a month to $184 a month.

Broadbent: Increase old-age security payments by $40 a month to $225 and give shelter grants to the poorest pensioners to help cover cost of rent or property taxes.

Northern affairs

Clark: Subsidize electricity rates for small businessmen and home heating oil for consumers in remote areas of the Yukon and the Northwest Territories to match the rates paid in Yellowknife and Whitehorse at an annual cost of $1.75 million.

Trudeau: No specific promises.

Broadbent: Spend $95.4 million a year to subsidize the higher cost of gasoline and home heating oil in northern communities.

Transport

Clark: Give a high priority to transit-related loan applications and consider removing a nine-per-cent federal sales tax from purchases of urban transit sytems. Provide $42.5 million for the first stage of development of a $244-million grain and coal terminal in Prince Rupert, B.C.

Trudeau: Force Canadian National Railways to twin its tracks between Winnipeg and Vancouver over eight years to help unclog the Prairie rail system. Give more autonomy to the port of Vancouver by transferring operational control to a local harbor commission from the National Harbors Board in Ottawa.

Broadbent: Establish a $300-million public transit development program to assist buying subway, streetcar, bus and light-transit equipment.

Wheat

Clark: Increase the maximum farmers can receive under the federal two-price wheat system to bring it closer to the world price of slightly more than $6 a bushel. That could increase the price of a loaf of bread by five cents.

Trudeau: Ensure farmers receive the benefit of high world wheat prices while protecting consumers from higher bread prices. He has not said how he will protect consumers.

Trudeau giving half-answers on energy: Clark

DAUPHIN, Man. (CP) — Prime Minister Clark Tuesday accused Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau of not telling Canadians "the whole truth about his energy policy."

Trudeau is the "master of the half-answer," Clark told an evening rally attended by about 1,100 supporters as he claimed the Liberals might raise the excise tax on gasoline by up to five cents a litre (20 cents a gallon) to cover the cost of subsidies on imported oil.

Both here and in Selkirk, Man., earlier in the day, Clark noted that Trudeau has refused to rule out the possibility of increasing the excise tax to pay the subsidies that are expected to amount to $2.7 billion this year. If he did that, the cost would be about five cents a litre.

However, the prime minister did not mention that Trudeau has said an increase in the tax is only one possibility. The Liberal leader, who has pledged not to reintroduce the 4.5-cent-a-litre (18-cent-a-gallon) increase proposed by the Progressive Conservatives, has also said a decrease in the tax is possible.

Clark based his statements on a report in The Toronto Star in which Trudeau continued his harsh attack on the Conservative proposals.

The prime minister campaigned Tuesday in two Manitoba ridings where the New Democrats are the main opposition. The Conservatives lost Selkirk-Interlake to the NDP in the May 22 election but retained the Dauphin seat by a slim 469 votes.

Clark said a vote for the NDP is a vote for the Liberals and attacked the New Democrats for not taking a firm stand on international affairs.

He quoted Terry Sargeant, NDP candidate in Selkirk-Interlake, as saying several months ago Canada should withdraw from NORAD, then reversing his stand to say the question should be studied.

"This is not the time for Canadians to be vague about our defence of freedom," Clark said.

The prime minister said his government acted quickly to oppose the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan by taking retaliatory steps such as limiting commercial relations. But he didn't mention limitations on grain sales, an issue farmers in this wheat-growing area are concerned about because of falling prices.

Introduced in Dauphin by Manitoba Premier Sterling Lyon as "the prime minister who is going to be with us in the 80s," Clark said only the Conservatives understand western Canada.

"For the first time since John Diefenbaker, we have a national government which understands the West and is determined to build a nation on the strength of western Canada," Clark declared.

The prime minister later flew to London, Ont., where he has a noon-hour speech today before campaigning in Hamilton and Niagara Falls.

VANCOUVER (CP) — U.S. television actors Patrick Duffy and Steve Kanaly violated the Canadian Election Act by campaigning for Progressive Conservative candidate Bill Otway, the New Democratic Party charged Monday.

Duffy and Kanaly, regulars on the CBS show Dallas, signed autographs and shook hands during five hours of mainstreeting with Otway Saturday morning in the Mission-Port Moody riding.

"But they in no way coerced voters," said Don Paterson, an Otway committee spokesman. "They appeared on their own time and without pay.

"They were coming up for a fishing trip with Bill and they came up a day early as friends to help Bill."

Mark Rose, who held the riding for the NDP in the last House, complained to the federal election commissioner that the actors violated a section of the federal Election Act, which prohibits non-Canadians from canvassing for votes or trying to induce electors to vote for a particular candidate.

Rose's campaign manager, Richard Pollard, said the two actors "were wearing Otway buttons and signing autographs on Otway literature."

In Ottawa, a spokesman for the election commissioner, said the office was studying the NDP complaint. Conviction could result in a fine for the actors, not Otway, he said.

Otway, who is on leave of absence during the campaign from his job as executive director of the B.C. Wildlife Federation, has known the actors for several years. They attended a federation dinner last fall and made plans then for their fishing trip.

By MARY JANIGAN
FP News Service

MONTREAL — Ed Broadbent won an election endorsement Tuesday from one of Quebec's most powerful French-language newspapers, but conceded his New Democratic Party has little hope of winning any seats in a province that has frozen it out since the party was formed.

Basking in the glow of a nod from the newspaper Le Devoir, Broadbent held out hope for NDP advances in Quebec once the province's referendum on independence is out of the way.

At the same time, he made clear he plans a relatively minor role in the referendum campaign itself.

The influential daily newspaper rolled off the presses with a complicated but powerful pitch for the New Democratic Party — it called it a vibrant opposition force with programs to meet Quebec needs — as the NDP leader made his final campaign appearance in the province.

For all it's support, however, the newspaper also concluded in a lengthy editorial that the party had no chance of winning in Quebec without support from organized labor. Quebecers, it suggested, should perhaps consider voting for the best candidate, regardless of party.

Broadbent pounced on the kind words as an encouraging credibility boost during a whirlwind Montreal tour in which he pushed for lower interest rates and pounded his opponents following a report that the unemployment rate last month climbed to 7.4 per cent from 7.1.

OTTAWA (CP) — About 15.4 million persons are entitled to vote in the Feb. 18 election, Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel says.

The official estimate is up about 250,000 from the total in the May 22 vote.

Hamel's office tallied up the number of names on voter lists across the country at 15,786,898, but the chief electoral officer said Tuesday between 350,000 and 400,000 persons probably are listed in more than one place, so the true total is about 15,400,000.

The multiple listings, officially illegal, arose because there was no door-to-door enumeration of voters this time. Officials are using the lists compiled for last May's election, revising them when voters who have moved since then apply to add their names in their new polling district.

"It's easy to add names," Hamel said, "but not so easy to get names off a list."

Listing of the same person in more than one polling district has occurred in the past when people are on the move during elections. Officially, a voter must be listed in his or her place of permanent residence, but it is up to the voter to say where that is.

Election law provides for a fine of up to $1,000 or a year in jail, or both, for anyone convicted of voting more than once or under a false listing. But officials cannot recall any convictions.

While there will be additions and deletions from the lists used this time in 67,732 polling stations right up to election day, Hamel says the final estimate is firm.

Last time, 76 per cent of eligible voters cast ballots. In the five previous elections, the percentage ranged from a low of 71 in 1974 to a high of almost 80 in 1963.

Powerful winds of change

Peterson's company, Windmill Manufacturing Alberta Ltd., is ready to erect its prototype windmill on a farm 30 kilometres east of Calgary.

The windmill will supply power for the farm. Excess power will be fed into the Calgary Power Ltd. system — perhaps an augur of the future when windmills, last seen in quantity during the Depression, will again dot the Prairie landscape.

Peterson, 30, says information gathered during next year's operation of the first unit will be used to fan up a market for the $7,500 devices.

He says the idea behind windmill power is that when the windmill produces less power than needed, the farm will use up that power and draw on Calgary Power for the difference. When more wind power than needed is produced, the excess flows into the Calgary Power system.

If the windmill's power flow is connected to the farm's electrical meter, the metre would run backwards when wind power is going into the utility system. It would be possible for the windmill owner to have a credit with the electric company, Peterson says.

Peterson, who has worked on the project about 10 months, has long had a conviction that wind power is feasible.

Calgary Power is interested in the research and development of wind technology, which could help the utility meet its peak demand for power, which determines needed generating capacity.

If windmills can help lower peak demand the company could conserve on investments in large thermal or hydroelectic generating stations.

A.C. Burnard, in Calgary Power's energy management department, says the company has three basic questions about wind power which will be answered when the prototype is put into operation sometime near the end of February.

The company's first concern is the difficult synchronization of the two power sources. A second concern is worker safety. It is critical that during an outage power from the windmill does not feed into utility lines.

"The workers would know what they'd disconnected but if there's voltage coming backwards down the line it creates unsafe working conditions."

Calgary Power also wants some hard statistics about how much energy, and how reliably, can be produced by windmills.

"How much of the time can the customer get power from the windmill? How many hours of the year will it produce power? Is it cost-effective?"

Manitoba exodus up

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Movers Association says there was a sharp increase last year in the number of households moved out of Manitoba.

The association calculates the movement by dividing the total weight of household goods shipped by 4,820 pounds—the average estimated weight of a Canadian family's household effects moved.

Using this formula, the association estimates that Manitoba had a net loss last year of 2,061 households, up 30 per cent over the 1978 level of 1,439 households.

The association's statistics show an estimated 1,139 households moved to Alberta from Manitoba last year, while an estimated 1,134 Manitoba households moved to British Columbia.

Manitoba gained more people from Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia than it lost to those four provinces.

Translating law a monumental task

SASKATOON (CP) — The Saskatchewan and Alberta governments could be faced with the monumental task of translating all provincial laws into French.

A spokesman for the Association Culterelle Franco-Canadian de la Saskatchewan said the association plans to hire a lawyer to study whether the Saskatchewan government has such a legal obligation.

Irene Chabot of Ferland, association president, said the association has been planning this investigation for some time.

The Supreme Court of Canada decision in December striking down an 1890 Manitoba law adds urgency to the situation, she said.

In a unanimous 7-0 decision, the court ruled that Manitoba went beyond its legislative powers in 1890 when it passed a law abrogating French-language rights, including the right to use French in the courts.

The decision was delivered after Georges Forest of St. Boniface went to court to protest a unilingual English parking ticket.

In response to the decision, the Manitoba government now is assembling a staff charged with translating all current statutes into French.

More doctors wanted in north

GRANDE PRAIRIE (CP) — The provincial government hopes to attract more doctors to northern Alberta, Garry Chatfield, deputy hospitals minister, said Tuesday.

Chatfield said there are six towns in northern Alberta which have requested assistance in attracting more doctors. He said paying more money, such as a northern allowance, could be a deciding factor.

Chatfield said he expects to have some recommendations in about a month.

Food needs, research linked

WINNIPEG (CP) — The agriculture industry must cultivate more research into energy and technology if future world food needs are to be met, farm leaders were told Tuesday.

Dobson Lea, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, issued the stern warning while urging farmers themselves to pay more for such studies.

Lea, whose message to the federation's annual meeting was poignant despite his emotionless delivery style, said he doesn't preclude continued participation of the consumer in funding research with tax dollars.

"Nonetheless, I think that producers can and should give more support and impetus to research . . ."

To encourage more research funds from producers through additional check-offs on the sales of farm commodities, he suggested a system of tax rebates.

Lea said an escalating world population combined with declining fuel supplies have made energy and food the core concerns for the decade ahead.

PCBs a threat to Regina water

REGINA (CP) — The largest spill of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) in Canada's history, which occurred in 1976, continues to spread and could threaten Regina's water supply if not stopped immediately, a National Research Council report states.

Measures taken so far to halt the spread of the chemical have been ineffective and a major excavation of contaminated soil is needed to ensure that PCBs do not eventually pollute wells that supply water to the city, says the report, released Tuesday.

PCBs are not immediately lethal but long-term effects include cancer and damage to the reproductive system, liver and the body's immunological system.

The spill occurred after an underground pipe carrying the chemical broke at a Federal Pioneer Ltd. plant in Regina. It is not known for certain how much was spilled, but estimates range as high as 5,000 gallons.

Some of the chemical was collected and removed from the site shortly after the spill, but most of it remained in the soil, the report says.

Contaminated groundwater is gradually seeping towards groundwater that supplies Regina's wells, the report says.

To stop movement of PCBs below the surface, the report recommends excavating between 10,000 and 20,000 cubic metres of contaminated soil — between 1,000 and 2,000 dump-truck loads.

It also recommends removing soil as deep as three metres below ground level in several areas.

However, it is unclear whether both excavations are necessary. Don Fast, spokesman for the provincial environment department, said clarification of the recommendations would be sought next week when authors of the report are in Regina.

Canada tells Spain to stop cod fishing

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Fisheries Minister James McGrath says Canada will close its ports to Spanish trawlers unless the government in Madrid heeds a diplomatic note delivered Tuesday.

McGrath said in an interview the note demands that Spain immediately withdraw three pairs of trawlers now fishing for cod on the tail of the bank, an area of the Grand Bank off Newfoundland just outside Canada's fishing limit of 200 naitical miles.

The three pairs are taking cod in an area where Canada says stocks are dangerously low. McGrath said Spain has announced it will take 7,000 tonnes of cod.

Pair-trawling is a system used only by the Spanish in which two vessels tow the same net. The Spaniards throw away everything but cod, including redfish and flounder, which are needed by Newfoundland plants.

Newfoundland trawlers already have been barred from taking cod on the Grand Bank in a move to allow stocks to rebuild.

"The next step will be the closing of the ports," McGrath said.

He said Canada also has asked France to support any closure of Canadian ports by barring the Spaniards from St. Pierre, capital of the French islands of St. Pierre-Miquelon off Newfoundland's south coast.

McGrath announced the delivery of the note following a news conference he shared with Finance Minister John C. Crosbie.

McGrath and Crosbie also announced a series of projects for their respective St. John's East and St. John's West ridings.

McGrath said the federal government will spend $2 million for a breakwater and other waterside improvements for the 80 full-time fishermen in St. John's. The breakwater will be built at The Battery, a community on the east side of the narrow entrance to St. John's harbor.

He said breakwaters will be built at Flatrock, 22 kilometres north of St. John's, and at Torbay, 12 kilometres north of the city. Fishermen in both communities have been seeking breakwaters for decades.

Viet refugees arrive

OTTAWA (CP) — The largest single group of Vietnamese refugees, flown in from Hong Kong in a Boeing 747, is resting in a Montreal reception centre before being sent to new homes in eastern Canada.

The 474 men, women and children who arrived Tuesday were the first flown here in a jumbo jet and they bring to 7,073 the number of so-called boat people from Vietnam accepted for resettlement in Canada.

With those from other countries, 34,233 refugees will have been brought here from Southeast Asia from the start of the program last summer through the end of February. Another 27,000 are expected in 1980.

When their plight became known, Canada pledged to bring a total of 50,000 of the Viet, Thai and Cambodian refugees to the country.

Derailed train route retraced

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — The conductor of the CP Rail Ltd. train that derailed Nov. 10 had an ideal place to inspect the train's equipment a few kilometres before the accident site, a CP Rail official said Tuesday.

John Kelsall, superintendent of the company's Sudbury division, told the royal commission investigating the accident that curved portions of tracks provide crew members with a good view of much of the train — including the part said to have caused the derailment — as they carry out routine visual inspection.

During questioning by Dennis Lane, lawyer for Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Co., Kelsall referred to a map showing the route of the train during the final segment of its journey from Windsor, Ont., to Mississauga and agreed that a long curve near Milton and an S-curve through nearby Streetsville "would be one of the points at which he (the conductor) would carry out running inspections."

Among other things, the conductor would check for early symptoms of an overheated journal bearing, Kelsall said, which may include smoke, sparks or an acrid, burning smell wafting down the length of the train.

At the time of the derailment, CP Rail said an overheated journal bearing caused the wheels to seize, breaking an axle and sending the chemical-laden train hurtling off the tracks.

About 225,000 Mississauga residents were evacuated when burning propane tankers threatened to ignite a ruptured chlorine car and send its potentially-lethal cargo drifting over heavily-populated areas of the city.

Kelsall was uninvolved in the Mississauga accident but was called to provide information about general railway operations and terminology.

Norman Chalmers, lawyer for CP Rail, objected to Kelsall being subjected to questions about the derailment, but Mr. Justice Samuel Grange of the Ontario Supreme Court, commissioner of the inquiry, overruled Chalmers, saying the inquiry's terms of reference involve an investigation of rail safety in general.

Broadbent blasts Trudeau economic record...

FP News Service

HAMILTON, Ont. — Ed Broadbent has opened a stinging attack on Pierre Trudeau in the dying days of the federal election campaign for being the creator of the problems that the NDP leader says the Liberals now are hypocritically offering to solve.

Broadbent told 500 boisterous partisans here Tuesday night that Trudeau fostered unemployment during his 11 years as prime minister by raising interest rates and by placidly ignoring the Canada - U.S. Auto Pact--despite Canada's long-standing deficit under the agreement.

He said these policies have cost Canadians jobs and are partially responsible for the latest Statistics Canada report that the unemployment rate has climbed to 7.4 per cent from 7.1. The New Democrat leader mocked Trudeau's 1980 campaign pledge to boost economic growth, charging that both Liberals and Conservatives are ignoring Canada's serious economic problems.

"If you look at the issue of unemployment (as it is treated by the other) parties in this country, you would think it did not exist. You would think they were living in another world."

Broadbent said that the Trudeau government increased interest rates seven times during the past few years and that Trudeau had not promised during the current campaign to lower the rates, despite his vocal opposition to four increases by the Conservatives.

He noted that Trudeau has promised to boost Canadian ownership of the resource industry, to overhaul the Foreign Investment Review Agency and to re-examine the operations of the Canada Development Corporation.

Broadbent said Trudeau made the same pledge to boost control of the Canadian resource sector in 1974, but that FIRA approved 90 per cent of foreign takeovers between 1974 and 1978 and that the New Democrats had always warned that CDC activities were creating more jobs abroad than in Canada.

"If we have Mr. Trudeau back, there won't be any industry remaining in the industrial heartland. Mr. Trudeau has now once again discovered the problems of foreign control of the economy. Where was he for 11 years?

"Surely there is a limit to what we should be taking at this time. Surely there is a limit to cynicism."

Earlier Tuesday, Broadbent basked in the glow of a lukewarm editorial endorsement from Le Devoir during a whirlwind Montreal visit.

The powerful French-language daily said the NDP is a vibrant opposition force with programs to meet Quebec needs. But the editorial also concluded that the party has no chance of winning seats in Quebec without the support of organized labor and it said Quebecers should perhaps consider voting for the best candidate, whatever the party.

The NDP leader said he hoped his party's chances in Quebec would increase after the June referendum on sovereignty-association, adding that he would stay out of that debate because the question is "for Quebecers themselves to decide."

. . while Grit chief details industrial strategy

By DAN TURNER
FP News Service

TORONTO — Foreign-owned firms will be scrutinized periodically to ensure that they are acting in the best interests of Canadians if the Liberal Party forms the government after the Feb. 18 federal election, Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau said Tuesday.

Announcing what was described as an industrial strategy for Canada, Trudeau said a Liberal government would also actively pursue the establishment of a Japanese-style state trading agency to funnel Canadian exports abroad.

Trudeau spoke before 1,100 members of the Toronto Advertising and Sales Club, getting a three-quarters standing ovation when he entered the room and getting about nine-tenths of the audience off their chairs as he departed after a low-key presentation.

In a clear pitch to the left wing of the party, to wavering New Democrats and to traditional Canadian nationalists, Trudeau said the Liberals would expand and strengthen the Foreign Investment Review Agency to keep closer tabs on foreign firms and to encourage Canadian investors to outbid foreigners in Canadian industrial takeovers.

He pledged that FIRA, seen by many as a toothless tiger since it was set up by the former Trudeau government in 1973 to screen foreign investments, would make a "periodic review" of non-Canadian companies to ensure they are promoting exports and conducting sufficient research and development.

Through government guarantees of bank loans, FIRA would also "help provide financial assistance to Canadian companies which want to compete with foreign takeovers or repatriate foreign ownership of Canadian assets."

In the audience was Herb Gray, Liberal finance critic in the last Parliament and one of the MPs most closely connected with both the Liberal left wing and the cause of Canadian nationalism. Gray, whose report on foreign ownership in the early 1970s helped inspire the setting up of FIRA, said he had been asked to look over the final version of the speech. "I wouldn't come all this way for lunch," added the Windsor MP.

As for a state trading agency, Trudeau said Japan had six of these, acting in concert with the industrial efforts of the country's domestic multinational firms. The trading companies were able to "aggressively seek export markets and serve as a conduit for smaller domestic firms that do not have the facilities to market for themselves."

He lamented that Canada had nothing comparable in the industrial sector to Petro—Canada in the energy sector, adding that the country "needed a catalyst" in the developed areas of the world.

Said Trudeau: "This concept will be pursued actively in connection with the private sector." The Liberal leader's proposals, which would appear to be the party's alternative to closer economic integration with the United States, had five major components:

--"To capitalize on Canada's energy base in order to build a world-competitive industrial sector." More than $100 billion would be spent in Canada during the next 10 years on energy projects and a Liberal government would ensure that the "ingredients for these development" were supplied by Canadian firms.

--"To ensure that the federal government is an active player in industrial development rather than just a passive referee." A Liberal government would prevent the "balkanization" of Canadian trade and work with the provinces to co-ordinate energy projects so that each province wasn't rushing to capital markets at the same time and getting in each other's way.

--"To strengthen Canada's research and development capacity." Trudeau said the Canadian Development Corporation should be "revitalized" to play a role in the industrial sector comparable to that which PetroCan has played in the natural resources sector.

--"To encourage independent, Canadian-owned enterprises." The Opposition leader said the Liberals would "re-orient" the federal government's procurement policies so that "wherever possible and reasonable," orders would be placed with Canadian-controlled companies.

--To expand control of the economy, while increasing benefits for Canadians from the foreign investment already here." FIRA would be empowered to try to deal with the paucity of research and development currently being done in Canada. The agency would also be required to publicize proposals for foreign takeovers beyond a certain size in order to encourage counter offers from Canadian controlled interests.

It was a speech to warm the hearts of nationalists and it apparently had much the same effect on Trudeau's Toronto audience Monday.

Abacus still popular

TOKYO (UPI) — All those pocket calculators for sale in Japan did not deter a record 1,284,127 people from taking national abacus exams in the last fiscal year, the Japan Chamber of Commerce and Industry said today.

The chamber, which sponsors three nationwide abacus exams each year, said 434,902 people slid beads to and fro in Sunday's last exam of fiscal year 1979 that ended March 31 to set the new recrod.

Riddle: What has 16 wheels and a trunk?
Answer: An elephant on roller skates.

That is what they have these days in Ojai, Calif., where Carol Buckley has outfitted her 6-year-old pet pachyderm with custom-made skates and has taught her to use them. "Basically she rolls on the front ones and kind of drags the back ones," her owner explained. "But she's improving every day. We practice twice a week, and she can even go in reverse now." Already the word has gotten out, and Buckley said she has had offers to exhibit her skating elephant — Baby Tarra is what she answers to — in both Spain and Japan.

Comedian Jerry Colonna, whose career was launched after Bob Hope signed him on for his radio show, is "recovering slowly" but is in good condition after a series of heart problems, officials say. Colonna remained in hospital this week at the Motion Picture and Television Country Hospital. The 75-year-old comedian, who suffered a stroke in 1966, has been in hospital since May 29.

In addition to his novels and short stories, Skvorecky, 55, is editor-in-chief of 68 Publishers, a company in Toronto which publishes works by Czechoslovak authors who can't be published in Europe.

"She's doing just great," said Robert Adams, a retired hospital executive director. "She's in good spirits." Adams and Rufus Burrus, who help look after Mrs. Truman's business and personal matters, will be among those who will visit her today.

Henry Winkler, better known as The Fonz on television's Happy Days show, will donate his trademark — a leather jacket — to the Smithsonian Institution. abby

Dear Abby:

A woman wrote to say that she "was losing her mind" because she was losing her hair. I read that article as I sat beside my father's bed on the cancer floor of our local hospital.

Across the hall a teen-age girl, who was bald, lay in the final stages of leukemia. Another patient, obviously wearing a hairpiece, occasionally shuffled past the door. From the elevator emerged a young father, bringing his little family to visit their ailing mother. They were thrilled to see her. Her thinning hair made no difference to them at all.

Need I say more?

J.M.C.

Dear J.M.C.:

Thank you for giving this writer, and several million readers, a renewed appreciation of good health. Your father will have my prayers.

Dear Abby:

My husband and I have been married for 19 years and have two teen-age children. Our marriage has been a good one.

Six months ago I found the stubs of two movie tickets in his jacket pocket. His "movie date" was not with me. It was a night that he had to "work late." When I confronted him, he broke down and admitted that he has been having an affair with his secretary for the past three years. He said it began when she started to confide her personal problems to him. She's a divorcee with two small children and he felt sorry for her.

He says he still loves me, but if he dumps her she will sabotage his office. He swears he doesn't love her, but he worries about the business should he let her go.

Abby, I can't believe this is happening to us. I feel blackmailed.

Am I being had?

Uptight

Dear Uptight:

Not yet. But you will be if you allow your husband to continue this affair until his secretary decides she's tired of waiting for a married man.

Dear Abby:

I have a boyfriend named Johnny who is really a sweet guy. He's a very unexciting person, and a very poor lover, but his family is in the money.

Barry is another guy I go with when Johnny is out of town (as he frequently is). Barry is a great lover, but he has no money and it is very embarrassing to be seen in public with him in his '55 Chevvy that has no heat, no seat covers and is painted with a hand brush and house paint.

I'm 28 and time is running out. Which should I choose? Money or sex?

Confused

Dear Confused:

It's human nature to want what you don't have. If you choose money, you'll miss the sex. If you choose sex, you'll miss the money. Don't make a choice while you're confused.

Dessert goes bananas!

By ELEANOR NEY
Christian Science Monitor

Although there are certain times of the year when our favorite fruits may not be available, there is no season without a few well-liked fruits in the markets.

Bananas and citrus fruits are with us the year around, and there are still winter pears available to satisfy the longing for fresh sweets to be served as desserts.

The pear is a fruit that tastes better when not ripened on the tree. The sugar content increases after picking as starch converts to sugar for improved flavor and smoother texture.

The banana has its distinctive characteristics, too. The banana plant isn't really a tree; it's an herb. Even when eaten in the tropics, bananas are ripened off the tree.

Both pears and bananas will ripen at room temperature. Contrary to oft-repeated advice, bananas can be kept in the refrigerator for several days after they have ripened to the stage you like.

We're all very familiar with the versatility of citrus fruits in both juice and the whole form. It is almost impossible to conceive of cooking in America without lemons and oranges. Here are some recipes using these fresh fruits.

Baked bananas make a versatile dessert treat whether served with fruit slices or covered in sauce

BANANA POUND CAKE

A banana pound cake is easy to make when entertaining. Based on yellow cake mix, it combines ripe mashed bananas, instant vanilla pudding, cinnamon and nutmeg. Wrap any leftover cake in foil and refrigerate.

4 eggs, at room temperature
⅓ cup salad oil
½ cup water
1⅓ cups mashed ripe bananas
1 package (three and three-fourth ounces) instant vanilla pudding mix
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg

Combine all ingredients in large bowl: Mix until blended, then beat at medium speed for 4 minutes. Turn batter into greased and lightly floured 10-inch tube pan. Bake in 350 degrees F. oven for one hour or until cake tester inserted in cake comes out clean. Cool in pan for 10 minutes, then turn out onto rack and cool completely. If desired, dust with confectioners' sugar before serving. Yield: 16 servings.

BAKED BANANAS

Baked bananas are a quick, simple desert or they may be served as an accompaniment to baked ham.

Wipe each banana and loosen one section of skin, then replace. Place fruit in shallow pan. Cover and bake until skin is dark, when bananas should be soft. Peel, then sprinkle with sugar or, if serving as a dessert, make a lemon sauce. Both sauce and bananas should be served warm.

PEAR MACAROON BAKE

Pears should be slightly underripe and firm for cooking. Pear Macaroon Bake is an easy dessert of pears, orange juice and macaroons.

The fresh fruit picks up subtle almond flavoring from the crumbled cooky topping. Serve as is, or with ice cream or whipped cream.

4 firm pears
2 tablespoons fresh orange juice
2 teaspoons grated fresh orange rind
1 cup crumbled macaroons (8 to 10)
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

Pare and core pears; cut into three-eighth-inch slices. Arrange in layers in an 8-inch greased shallow baking pan or pie plate. Sprinkle orange juice and grated rind over pears. Distribute crumbled macaroons evenly over pears; dot with butter. Bake in 400 degrees F. oven for 15 to 20 minutes or until pears are tender and macaroons are browned. Baking time will vary according to the type of pear used. Serve warm. Yield: 6 servings.

PEAR MOUSSE

1 cup mashed fresh pears, cored and pared
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon gelatin
1 tablespoon cold water
1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Add sugar to mashed pears. Add gelatin dissolved in the water. Fold in stiffly whipped cream. Freeze in refrigerator tray for 3 to 4 hours. If desired, chopped pecans or walnuts may be added to pear mixture before it is frozen. Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

Ole! Warm up to these enchiladas

By BARBARA P[illegible]NSEN
Los Angeles Ti[illegible]s

Tostadas and enchiladas rank among the most popular Mexican foods in the country.

If these are your favorites, try the following recipes. The tostada is made in the traditional style, but the enchiladas are different.

Instead of the usual cheese filling and red sauce, the enchiladas are stuffed with cottage cheese, sour cream and green onions and topped with a tomato sauce flavored with chili powder.

With so many Mexican restaurants popping up all over the United States and Canada, many people have developed a taste for these delectable dishes.

Teenagers especially will love this home-cooked yet exotic fare.

CALIFORNIA TOSTADAS

Oil
4 (17-ounce) can refried beans, heated
Hot Beef Filling
2 cups shredded lettuce
2 tomatoes, sliced
1 avocado, sliced
Shredded jack cheese
1 cup sour cream
8 ripe olives, sliced

Fry tortillas on both sides in oil until crisp. Drain on paper towels. Spread each tortilla with refried beans, then top with Hot Beef Filling. Arrange shredded lettuce, tomato and avocado slices on each tostada. Sprinkle with cheese and garnish with sour cream and sliced olives. Makes 8 tostadas.

HOT BEEF FILLING

1 small onion, minced
1 clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons oil
1 pound ground beef
⅓ cup chopped ripe olives
1 (1½-ounce) envelope taco seasoning mix
Salt, pepper

Cook onion and garlic in oil until onion is tender. Add meat and brown. Add olives and taco seasoning mix and simmer until heated through. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

CREAMY ENCHILADAS RANCHERAS

1 cup sour cream
1½ cups small curd cottage cheese
1 cup sliced green onions
1 (7-ounce) can diced green chiles
12 corn tortillas
Oil
9 ounces jack cheese, shredded
Enchilada Sauce
1 avocado, sliced

Combine sour cream, cottage cheese, green onions and chiles and set aside. Fry each tortilla in hot oil until softened. Spoon one-quarter cup sour cream mixture onto centre of tortilla. Set aside about one-half cup shredded jack cheese for topping. Sprinkle filling in each tortilla with remaining cheese. Roll tortillas and place seam side down in a 13-by-9-inch baking dish. Spoon Enchilada Sauce over filled tortillas. Bake at 350 degrees 15 minutes, or until heated through. Just before serving, top with avocado slices and sprinkle with remaining jack cheese.

Makes 12 enchiladas.

1 (15 ounce) can tomato sauce
1½ cup water
2½ teaspoons chili powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ teaspoon ground cumin
Dash hot pepper sauce

Combine tomato sauce, water, chili powder, salt, garlic powder, cumin and hot pepper sauce in saucepan and simmer 20 minutes.

New 'purified' insulin not a panacea

By Dr. L. L. COLEMAN

Many diabetics whose health depends on the daily use of insulin seem to be confused about reports of a new "purified" form of insulin because it has been used in Denmark and in some other countries of the world, and yet has been unavailable in the United States.

Now, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration is planning to release purified insulin for manufacture in the United States. When the purified insulin is released, diabetics will flock to purchase it in the hope that their diabetic condition will be markedly benefited.

However, it must be noted that the new purified form of insulin will not have any significant advantages in the control of diabetes over that which is being used at the present time. Only in isolated instances, where people are allergic to the standard insulin, or where there is some form of insulin resistance, can any real advantage be anticipated.

Already there is a trend that shows that some people are trying to buy insulin abroad in the false belief that this is the total answer to their diabetic problem.

Diabetics who are doing well on their present regime should make no change without the specific advice of their doctors.

It has long been recognized that minute movements of the eyes are an excellent indication of the health of the body.

Nystagmus, or the to-and-fro movement of the eyes, occurs under special circumstances. These movements are noted among patients who have special forms of dizziness.

Now, at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., a new computerized device has been created for the study of eye movements.

Dr. Robert Ledley and his co-workers, using this highly technical system, are learning exactly how messages are passed from the brain to the eye muscles. By studying these pathways it is possible to detect some neurological conditions which previously may have mystified doctors.

It is hoped that multiple sclerosis, myasthenia gravis, Huntington's disease and many related neurological disorders will be detected at an early phase so that intensive treatment can begin at the onset.

It is now possible for a small tube, or catheter, to be passed through the abdominal wall directly into the gallbladder. Drainage of the gallbladder and release of obstruction to the free flow of bile has been accomplished by this technique.

Although this method needs a great deal of further study, it already portends to be a valuable tool in the treatment of gallbladder disease.

questions & answers

Q: What is cream fraiche? A recipe I would like to try calls for half a cup of this. Where can I buy it? Or, can I make it at home?

A: Creme fraiche is what the French call their own fresh cream, which is a thick, slightly ripened version of the American whipping or heavy cream. Some people associate creme fraiche with sour cream but it differs from the latter in that it is creamier, richer and silkier, is less tart, has a pourable consistency and it can be whipped.

Various types of this French cream can be purchased at some specialty gourmet shops. They are very expensive and some people familiar with the real creme fraiche say that they are not quite like the French version.

To make a cup of creme fraiche at home, stir 2 tablespoons sour cream or 1 tablespoon buttermilk into 1 cup whipping cream. Heat over very low heat to about 85 degrees, a barely lukewarm temperature. Place in a sterilized jar, cover loosely and let stand at room temperature (between 65 and 90 degrees, preferably 80 degrees) until somewhat thickened. This will take from 8 to 24 hours.

Ultra-pasteurized cream usually takes longer to thicken than the old-fashioned cream. Do not allow to ferment or over-thicken because it continues to thicken when stored in the refrigerator. When done there still should be a little liquid present in the bottom of the jar. Stir thoroughly and keep in the refrigerator for two to three weeks.

Q: In preparation for my daughters' wedding reception at our home, I would like to freeze some quiches in advance. My first question is: why must quiche shells be pre-baked before filling? At what point do I freeze the quiche for future use? Also, how long should I bake it and at what temperature after freezing?

A: Because quiches are custard-based pies or tarts, the creamy egg mixture sometimes soaks into the bottom of the crust and makes it soggy. Therefore, in order to avoid this dilemma, many recipes call for prebaking the crust for a few minutes. Freezing is not advisable for quiches because as with any other custardy mixture, freezing gives a grainy, curdled effect. And reheating only makes this more pronounced.

For your reception you may want to prepare the crusts in large tart pans or rectangular aluminum baking trays then prebake and freeze them.

Q: I read the question about sifting flour in baking in your column recently and would like to ask a similar question about powdered sugar.

A: Unless the powdered sugar has become damp and lumpy, it isn't always necessary to sift it. Sifting also will depend on whether the recipe calls for it and on the amount needed. For instance, if you recipe calls for 1 pound, simply empty out a 1-pound package without measuring or sifting. If the recipe calls for cup-measured sugar, do sift before measuring. A pound of powdered sugar measures about 3½ cups before sifting and 4¾ cups after sifting.

Q: Technically, how much leavening power does one egg have as compared with baking powder?

A: One beaten egg has the equivalent leavening strength of ½ teaspoon baking powder.

Q: I brought home a bag of unbleached flour by mistake. What adjustments do I make in the average recipe calling for regular white flour?

A: Nothing. The two flours can be used interchangeably. Except for a more creamy color (rather than white) in the finished product, there's no other appreciable difference between the two. Substituting unbleached whole wheat flour, however, will make a difference and requires adjustment.

If you're forced to diet then do it with class!

Low-calorie food tastes better when it's served elegantly; try Waterford crystal, and even a lowly scoop of low-fat cottage cheese can take on filling proportions.

At least, that's the theory Roslyn Nitkin uses to get her seriously overweight patients on the road to slimmer, healthier bodies. "Invest in proper dishes," advises Nitkin, a nutritionist at Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center in New Hyde Park, N.Y. "It doesn't cost that much extra and I always tell my patients, you're on a diet, you deserve it. Besides, food tastes better in stemware!"

Drink water from a pretty glass, with a lemon floating in it, suggests, Nitkin, and you won't feel as deprived. When hunger pangs hit, try water first before reaching for food, she said. "Before a party, have a salad," she added, to stave off hunger and the temptation of grab for the first platter of hors d'oeuvres when you arrive.

"I think it's very important psychologically to have a dessert," said Nitkin. Fruit is the preferred choice, with a garnish to liven it up — a few sprinkles of shredded coconut or fresh mint leaves will do. Instead of a wedge of melon, scoop out melon balls — it seems like more, Nitkin said.

Nitkin said she uses a conservative approach, the slow but sure method to weight loss: "Don't expect to lose much weight tomorrow." But over weeks, even months, Nitkin said, her plan is successful.

craig claiborne

Although I have dined on dishes made with bulghur (also spelled bulgur, bulghour and boolgur), the cracked-wheat cereal that is essential to the cuisine of the Middle East, I had never been so thoroughly informed until a rash of correspondence arrived countering a column in which I had dismissed it as a transliteration of the Turkish word burghul.

It turns out, according to several readers, that bulgur is by no means a transliteration but rather a transposition. In the spelling of burghul, the "l" and the "r" of the word are altered, one for the other.

John Boyajy, who teaches the cuisine of the Middle East in Manhattan, informed us that "burghul is presteamed whole wheat and is used for various dishes as pointed out in your column."

"It is available in four sizes," Boyajy wrote, "graded one through four, fine to very coarse. The fine is used for tabooley, the cracked wheat specialty made with lemon juice, tomatoes, parsley and so on. The slightly larger grain is used for kibbeh, the ground lamb dish served raw or cooked.

"Number three is made into a magnificent pilaf . . . and number four is also used in pilaf, generally by Syrians who come from Aleppo . . . ."

Geoffrey H. Arnold of Cambridge, Mass., said that the Turkish word burghul literally means "bruised grains." He added, "A familiar American derivative is the word burgoo, undoubtedly well known to you."

I am still puzzling that one. Just how that regional Kentucky dish made with beef and chicken (originally squirrel and wild duck) and a gardenful of Southern vegetables is related to "bruised grains" eludes me, unless it has to do with the corn kernels essential to a genuine burgoo.

When a reader asked about the word demitasse recently, I mentioned in passing that the word does occur in French.

This brought forth a note from Parke L. Bradley of Manhattan, who said, "I was surprised by your response to the question regarding 'demitasse.'

"The word 'demitasse' is classified by the French as 'franglais' or American French. The French are getting huffy these days about foreign infiltration in their language and the Academie Francaise has the final word on what is French and what is not. As far as I know, the French have not welcomed the word 'demitasse' into their language, as they are attempting to avoid anglicisms whenever possible."

I do not have the Academie Francaise manual of usage on hand. I do, however, have before me the 1938 edition of Larousse Gastronomique in French. It states quite clearly, in French, of course, that a demitasse is one of two things: a small coffee cup, or a small cup of black coffee.

I agree with Bradley that you will rarely, if ever, hear a Frenchman ask for a "demitasse." A cafe, yes, or a cafe noir.

Someone wrote to ask the meaning of a plum preserves that was listed on the label as "half-stoned." I volunteered the guess that it referred to a batch of preserves made from fruit, half the number of which had had the pits or stones removed.

This elicited a letter from Adele Shaw of Darien, Conn., who wrote as follows:

"I once commented to the owner of a shop where I purchase the Tiptree brand of preserves that I avoided the morello (a dark red, black sour cherry) because of the 'half-stoned' or 'part-stoned' legend. She laughed and told me that they do not contain pits or stones but assumed that the producer protected himself from lawsuits in the event that one slipped through."

Now you can try baking with super triticale

By HILDA BEASTALL

Among the flours and cereal gains the new word Triticale has appeared. Pronounced trit-ee-cal-ee, the word came to my attention first just eight months ago. It was coined for a hybrid grain cross between Triticum, the generic name for wheat, and Secale, the name for rye.

Early this year, the new product was already on some grocery shelves side by side with other cereal flakes of wheat, oat, rye and barley. The flakes of triticale are used in the same way as the others.

Experimental work on the new grain according to last year's report was carried out in Canada at the University of Manitoba, and at the international Maize and Wheat Improvement Centre in Mexico. The aim was to find a grain which could be grown almost anywhere, in different geographical areas under varying conditions.

The report continued — the new grain combines the high yield and nutrition of wheat with the vigor and hardiness of rye. The flavor can be considered as a blend of the two and bread and muffins made with the triticale flakes have a really delicious taste accoring to my own trials.

Triticale is available as flour on a small scale but I have not yet discovered it locally. Ask around for it; it will no doubt be in stores before long. The flakes have already been well received in such diverse countries as Brazil, Norway, Hungary and India. In southern Mexico, Triticale bread is seriously competing with corn tortillas and tamales.

The value in having this hybrid grain available for production in Canada as well as in other countries is some kind of insurance against crop failure or the dwindling land areas suited to wheat growing. The new grain is likely to be adapted to growing in more northerly regions with a shorter season and lower temperatures than required by wheat.

Using the new triticale flakes I made two loaves of bread, finding the recipe on the bag similar to those I had created for using other flaked grains in bread. With a few minor changes to suit my own methods of handling break-making in the easiest way, here is the recipe I finally used successfully.

It made one regular loaf and one small, in loaf pans. Texture was of medium density because of unbleached flour being part of the mixture. The yeast amount was sufficient to raise the dough to the rim of the pans. Flavor was all I expected from having made many kinds of breads, some with the combination of rye flour or rye flakes with wholewheat flour. Color was just a pleasant brown, easily adjusted by changing amount of blackstrap molasses.

But don't forget that whether you use molasses, honey, or sugar it all ends up as sugar so far as body metabolism is concerned. Some have the minerals that have been removed from white sugar. To be consistent with a new food product we shall use the metric measuring cup and spoons with which there is no need for conversions.

TRITICALE BREAD

15 mL granular baking yeast (1 pkt.)
125 mL warm water
5 mL sugar
60 mL soft margarine
125 mL brown sugar and molasses mixed
10 mL salt (scant)
500 mL hot water
250 mL triticale flakes
250 mL wholewheat flour
500 mL unbleached flour
180 mL skim milk powder
750 mL unbleached flour (Approx.)

In large warmed mixing bowl, measure warm water and 5 mL sugar. Stir to dissolve. Sprinkle yeast on surface and let stand 10 minutes.

Into smaller bowl, measure margarine (use oil if you like), sugar and molasses and salt. Pour 500 mL hot water over all; add Triticale flakes, mixing a little. Let cool to about lukewarm, about 3 minutes.

Now begin adding wholewheat flour and first amount unbleached flour, beating with the large spoon by lifting the mixture at each stroke to get air into the dough.

Start beating in second amount of unbleached flour, as much as needed for fairly firm dough, almost dry on the outside.

Continue lifting mass with spoon, flopping the dough down into bowl each time. This takes place of kneading and should take at least five minutes (by clock) to get a light smooth texture.

Divide dough into two with spoon and knife, to suit your two pans; or you can make two round loaves if you wish.

Place each portion into well greased and lightly floured pans.

Now here is the quick method of raising bread dough, as follows: Place both pans of dough into cold oven. Turn switch to very slow heat 35 Deg. C for 10 minutes until dough begins rising; then turn heat off and leave pans in oven.

After 10 minutes check to see if dough has risen to just about double. If so, turn switch to fairly hot 205 Deg. C to stop the rising and commence baking.

After 10 minutes at this high temperature, turn switch down to moderate 177 Deg. C to finish baking, which will be for about another 30 minutes.

In some ovens (thermometers vary a little on stoves) it may be necessary to cover loaves loosely with foil wrap after turning heat down to moderate baking range.

When cooked, remove pans from oven; remove bread from pans at once to cool on wire rack.

If you enjoy homemade bread of whole grains you will like Triticale bread. The loaves sliced thinly so they could be served as a special for lunches or teas, with small pieces of cheese, or finely chopped chickweed with yogurt.

For lunch boxes, use some of the dough to make big buns in 4-inch foil pans. Split open into three layers, putting together with cheddar cheese, peanut butter, grated carrot in a little yogurt for moisture.

Triticale Bread is just another good bread to make at home to add variety for keeping everyone going at top efficiency.

Sock away some stock and you can save a bundle

the 60-minute gourmet

It has long been my contention that if home cooks exercised a little foresight, they could save themselves time and money. Essentially, this would include the basic preparation and freezing of such stocks as chicken, beef and fish. For example, if you found an especially good buy on chicken parts (necks, backbones, wings and so on), you would benefit by buying them and throwing them into a stock pot with a little water and a few vegetables to make the basis for countless stews and sauces. You might ask your fish dealer to throw in a few fish bones and, preferably, fish heads along with your purchase. These, too, should be cooked, strained and frozen for future use. You should clearly label these various stocks.

I recently prepared a quickly cooked fish dish that, for want of a better term, I chose to call Mediterranee. Mediterranee, Cote d'Azur and so on are simply broad terms to indicate fish or seafood generally cooked with tomatoes and various seasonings — usually garlic, bay leaf and thyme.

Even if you must start from scratch in preparing the stock, the dish, with an accompanying combination of vegetables, could easily be prepared within an hour. The cooking time for a basic fish stock or broth is less than that of a chicken or beef broth. It does not need long simmering to extract the goodness from the bones. The bones require only 10 minutes to reach a totally acceptable degree of flavor.

Fumet de Poisson

2 cups water.
Salt to taste.

Chop the fish bones into pieces so that they will fit into a saucepan. Combine all the ingredients in a saucepan. Bring to the boil and simmer about 10 minutes. Strain. Discard solids.

Yield: About 2¼ cups.

Note: Leftover broth can be frozen.

Irish feast: 6 of the courses come in bottles

your partner's cookbook

By MIKE McGRADY

Q: What's a 13-course meal in Ireland? A: A piece of corned beef, a slab of cabbage, a few boiled potatoes, some turnips, Irish coffee and a six-pack.

(Editor's note: This adds to 11, but perhaps Mr. McGrady plans to have three Irish coffees.)

Tonight, an Irish banquet.

The Staples: Make sure these are all on hand: whiskey (Irish, if possible); mustard, horseradish; butter; coffee; sugar; salt; cloves; peppercorns; beer.

The Shopping List: Corned beef, four to five pounds; one bunch of parsley; two pounds of potatoes, preferably small ones; one pound of carrots; two pounds of turnips and/or parsnips; three large onions; one large head of cabbage; small container of cream, whipped if desired.

You can, if you wish, make your own corned beef from scratch, buying a large brisket of beef and refrigerating it in a gallon of corning solution for just less than a month. However, keeping all this in the refrigerator may not endear you to the rest of the family, so why don't we begin by just buying a piece of previously corned beef?

Cooking this piece of meat is going to require a good amount of time, anywhere from three to four hours, depending on the weight of the meat, so plan on beginning fairly early in the day.

2:30 p.m.: Put the corned beef in a deep, heavy pot and cover it with cold water. Turn the heat to high. When the water comes to a boil, reduce the heat to low and just keep the water simmering. At this time you can add a pinch of cloves, the same amount of peppercorns and the onions chopped fine.

5:30 p.m.: Peel the turnips and/or parsnips but do not slice them. Add them to the pot.

5:45 p.m.: Now add the carrots, peeled but not sliced. When the carrots are in the pot, peel the potatoes.

6 p.m.: Add the potatoes. At this point, you are doubtless wondering how you can be sure that all of these various ingredients — and we haven't even come to the cabbage — are going to be done at precisely the same time. Well, you can't be sure. And in fact, if it happens that if works out that way, everything cooked properly at the same exact moment, this may be your day.

But this last half hour, you'll be doing a lot of testing, jabbing one of those two-pronged forks here and there. When the fork passes easily through the centre of the meat, it is done. At this time, if the vegetables have not completed their cooking, you remove the corned beef from the pot, wrap it in metal foil, and return it for a final hot bath just before serving it.

6:10 p.m.: Cut the head of cabbage in half and slice away the core. Then cut the halves into wedges and add them to the pot. The cabbage should be tender in 15 to 20 minutes.

Meanwhile, if any of the vegetables have become tender, they can be removed from the pot and held aside until the final moment. However, at 6:25 all the ingredients should be back in the pot.

6:30 p.m.: Slice the corned beef across the grain into moderately thin slices and arrange them on the centre of a serving platter. Surround them with the vegetables and allow butter to melt over the lot. Add a sprinkling of chopped parsley and serve in the company of mustard and horseradish. Then go to the refrigerator and fetch the next six courses.

After dinner serve the Irish coffee — two ounces of good whiskey, a teaspoon of sugar, strong coffee, all of it topped with cream. According to James Joyce, the cream should be poured "slowly in circular motion. Allow cream to float on top of coffee. Do not stir again. Excellent for after-dinner conversation."

Incidentally, don't be concerned if there are leftovers. Simply combine them into a corned beef hash.

Court challenge ahead for U.S. junk food law

By MARION BURROS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Department of Agriculture's controversial "junk food" regulation governing what can be sold in school vending machines will be in the courts before it is ever in force.

The regulation was announced last month, and the only reason the first court challenge wasn't filed at the same time was because the regulation wasn't signed until after the courts had closed for the weekend.

On the following Monday, a consumer coalition led by the Community Nutrition Institute asked that the regulation be amended to get rid of the "loopholes" and make it "consistent with the intent of Congress." According to CNI's Ellen Haas, Congress wants the foods sold in schools to "make a nutritional contibution to the diet and dietary habits."

Haas says the current regulation is USDA's second attempt to control the kinds of foods the children can eat in school which compete directly with what is served in the school lunch program. These are the foods usually sold in vending machines.

The new ban covers soda pop, water ices, chewing gums and candies such as marshmallows, corn candy and hard candy — but candies that contain chocolate, for example, would not be banned. Potato chips pretzels, fruit-flavored juice drinks, even such products as Kool-Aid are not included in the ban.

Any food that contains 5 per cent of the recommended daily allowance of just one of eight nutrients is deemed acceptable under the new regulation.

Asked if a manufacturer couldn't simply fortify food or drink with 5 per cent of any single nutrient and then qualify, Assistant Secretary Carol Foreman said the new FDA proposal on food fortification will make that impossible.

FDA has just announced a proposal governing the fortification of foods.

Udderly new pitch for milk

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Dairy farmers may soon forget the health message and go for plenty of skin, youthful vigor and sexual innuendo to sell milk to teenagers.

An official of the National Dairy Council in Ottawa said in a telephone interview Tuesday that the industry is convinced the approach will sell more milk, but there are some who hesitate about the image it will create.

"There's a bit too much skin," he said of the advertising and promotion scheme that has been used with great success in Australia.

Des Cooper of the Victoria Dairy Industry Authority in Australia said the aim of the campaign there is to take away some of the market from soft drinks by offering lightly-flavored milk.

He thinks Canadians should try caramel, egg flip or coffee flavors. Six flavors have been tried in Australia and the dairy industry says it has increased milk sales by 10 to 12 per cent and has reduced soft-drink sales by 10 per cent.

"We are studying it (the Australian scheme) at some length," said Michael Pearce, advertising manager for the Ontario Milk Marketing Board.

Pearce said the Australian television ads show teenagers in bathing suits in swimming pools and on beaches.

They are attractive, full of vigor and having fun, Pearce said.

Cooper said the promotion won't work if one dairy or only a few pick it up as an exclusive product. He said it should be promoted and coordinated industry-wide.

Pearce said he is drafting a proposal to the marketing board for test marketing.

While Ontario dairy farmer ponder the best way to promote sales, Albertans are consuming more milk per capita than the rest of Canada and skin has nothing to do with it. Officials credit a province-wide advertising campaign urging residents to "wear a mustache."

Ralph Jesperson, chairman of the Alberta Dairmen's Association promotion committee, said Tuesday the average Albertan drank 116.3 litres of milk in 1979, compared with the national average of 103.5 litres.

Shared pads on way back

VANCOUVER (CP) — With the city's vacancy rate approaching zero, people are turning again to shared housing as a way of getting the best accommodation at the cheapest rate.

The new wave of sharing, however, is different from the communal houses of the early 1970s where people cashed their student grants and unemployment cheques to cover everything from staples to entertainment for the house.

The shared houses today aren't called communes — they're called mixed houses or shared accommodation and many are run on a purely business basis, with your commitment to the other residents extending no further than helping keep cockroaches at a minimum and delivering your share of the rent on time.

Up to eight or 10 years ago, most people took doubling up for granted, says a University of B.C. housing expert. Then, as rents held relatively stable while tenants' incomes increased, more people moved out on their own.

"From 1971 to 1976, one of the major contributions for housing accommodation was people undoubling," says Stanley Hamilton, associate dean of commerce and business administration. "We take up more space than we did five or eight years ago.

In 1971, Statistics Canada reported 55,000 persons living alone in metropolitan Vancouver. By 1976, the most recent figures available, that number increased to almost 85,000.

"About one-quarter of the people who would be looking for a bachelor or one bedroom apartment and can't afford any more than $200 are having to revert to shared accommodation," says Colleen Martin of the YWCA's housing registry.

Along with being an inexpensive way to live, sharing means instant companionship.

"I don't like living alone," says Allan Saqui. Until recently, he shared his three-bedroom Richmond home with two women.

Ray Donnelly, of the housing advisory service at Kitsilano Neighborhood House, said most people try to strike a balance between men and women in shared housing.

Donnelly says most people find it easier to share with their friends than with strangers. However, some prefer to keep their friends and home life separate.

Both Martin and Donnelly recommend being honest in trying to select roommates — tell them you hate vegetables or love rock music. Decide before you move in what will be shared and what each person's responsibilities are and then no one can complain later.

Gripe Day to be real blast

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — Frustration about anything from newspapers landing on the roof to the international balance of payments will rise in a cloud of noise above Cheyenne, Wyo., where citizens have been invited to lean on their car horns in a collective expression of Cheyenne Gripe Day. Mayor Don Erickson invited residents to blast away at 12:05 p.m. "as an audible and public announcement of resistance." To what? To one's choice of "catastrophes, crises, disasters and emergencies ranging from the worst winter since 1905 to the first tornado in Cheyenne history," last year.

Encouraging creative complaining, he suggested as targets: mean nurses; being put "on hold" by the police department; being put on hold by anyone, "and any little thing that galls one, all the way from the Ayatollah Khomeini to the wind."

Fat folks new minority

BALTIMORE (AP) — Fat people are discriminated against almost as much as blacks and other minorities, a Maryland state study concludes.

David Tucker of Columbia, Md., a consultant who directed the study for the state Human Relations Commission, said fat people are victims of discrimination in virtually every aspect of life, from their workplace to theatres and sports arenas.

Tucker said he drew his conclusions after interviewing 600 members of the National Association to Aid Fat Persons, as well as representatives of the state's largest employers and 200 small businesses.

Few cases of weight and size discrimination are reported to authorities, "because very few persons realize they are protected by law," he said. "Also, they are so used to being discriminated against."

"One of the problems is that fat people tend to accept it as their fault," Tucker said.

Respondents said fat people are characterized by their employers as "lazy, lacking in self-discipline, sloppy, not well motivated, unclean and, in one case, smelly," the report says.

Lawsuits leave me cold: Pickup

Lawsuits would be a negative way to improve the education system, Greater Victoria School District chairman Carol Pickup said Tuesday.

She was reacting to a suggestion by Trustee John Young, who said he would welcome a suit against the board for educational malpractice.

The board Monday discussed a B.C. School Trustee Association paper on educational malpractice or misdiagnosis involving children with learning problems.

"Frequently the best avenue for getting justice is through the courts," Young said.

"I really don't see that," Pickup replied. "That's not my view, nor the majority view of the board. Lawsuits leave me cold."

She said the board is trying to meet the needs of children with learning disabilities and there was little to be gained by inviting legal processes.

It had been found in the U.S. and other places that lawsuits are a negative approach and not in the best interests of children. They cause retrenchment and acrimony, Pickup said.

The BCSTA is concerned that action could be launched against a school board if problems are misdiagnosed either by school districts or at regional diagnostic centres under consideration by the education ministry.

Young said the board had not taken serious action to discharge its responsibility to the learning disabled, and that the injustice will continue to be dealt with at a leisurely pace.

If parents sued the district for its failure to provide proper educational resources, the process would soon speed up, he said.

The system is oriented to university entrance, run by university graduates, leaving about one-third of the school population inadequately served and undereducated, he said.

Trustee Mark Fisher said not all problems should be blamed on the system. In some families a child's problems are part of the social balance and to remedy would be opposed by the family.

It would be irresponsible for anyone to encourage lawsuits, said Trustee Mike Hutchison, himself a lawyer.

Scouts, guides march Sunday

One of the largest youth gatherings in Victoria for years will take place Sunday when more than 1,000 members of the Scout-Guide movements will take part in a torchlight parade.

Sunday is the beginning of Scout-Guide Week and the parade, which will begin at the Hillside Shopping Centre at 7 p.m., will honor the founders of the two movements.

Following the opening ceremony, the parade will go north on Shelbourne, east on McRae, north on Richmond and up to Mount Tolmie along Mayfair Drive.

The return route will be by Cedar Hill Cross Road to Shelbourne, ending at the First Cedar Hill Scout and Guide Hall.

In addition to the parade, Scouts from Sooke to Sidney will be represented at the community level during the week.

In Victoria, arrangements are being completed for Scouts to take part at the official opening next Tuesday of the Western Hockey League's game between the Victoria Cougars and the Seattle Breakers.

To further publicize Scouting, a display will be set up at Mayfair Mall toward the end of next week. The Bay and Eaton's will feature displays emphasizing the outdoor activities of Scouting.

Arrowsmith T-bar ready

A trailer will be hauled Friday to the site of a $60,000 fire at Mount Arrowsmith and the ski resort will continue to operate the T-bar from Friday through to Monday until the end of the skiing season.

The Feb. 3 fire gutted the cafeteria and equipment rental lodges.

Investigators have determined the fire started when an oil heater in the cafeteria malfunctioned.

Phys ed experts visiting university

Two physical education specialists with national and international reputations are visiting the University of Victoria as Lansdowne scholars.

They are Dr. Earle Zeigler, professor of physical education at University of Western Ontario, and Dr. Stewart A. Davidson of the phys ed department at University of Ottawa.

Zeigler, author of more than 300 articles and editor or author of 16 books on physical education and sports, will give a free public lecture Feb. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in room 150 of McKinnon centre. Its title: The Future of Physical Education and Sport: A Philosphical Perspective.

He arrives on campus Feb. 25 and will give a number of lectures to students and consult with professors before his departure Feb. 29.

Davidson arrived this week and remains until Feb. 22, lecturing to students and faculty.

The day before departure he will speak on The Importance of Physical Education to the School Curriculum, in room 168 of the MacLaurin building.

On Thursday of this week at 12:30 in the same room, Davidson speaks on the Canadian sculptor-physician-physical educator R. Tait McKenzie.

The visitor also has published numerous works in his field and is completing an oral history of physical education in Canada.

Before the judge

Two judges handed a 17-year-old a total of nine months in jail Tuesday in provincial court.

Daryn Andre Wybert, 1370 Lyall, was given seven months by Judge Blake Allan and he received an additional two months about 10 minutes later from Judge William Ostler, who made his sentence consecutive so that Wybert could be eligible for the Boulder Bay camp program.

Allan's sentence was for a charge of being unlawfully in a dwelling house, to which Wybert pleaded guilty Jan. 29 and was remanded in custody until Tuesday for a presentence report.

Court was told an elderly couple returning to their Nelson Street home in Esquimalt from a trip to Reno on Jan. 26 saw a light turned off in their house as they were approaching it. Inside, they found Wybert hiding behind a closet door. The youth told them he was a friend of the landlord's and was checking out the house for him. The landlord was telephoned and admitted he knew the Wybert family but had not given the youth permission to check the house.

Wybert told Esquimalt police he saw the rear door was open and decided to check the windows.

Wybert had a juvenile record dating back to March, 1976, including convictions for theft, possession of stolen property, breaking and entering, common assault, and being unlawfully in a dwelling house.

Ostler's sentence was for a charge of theft under $200.

Wybert was caught Nov. 14 at the rear of Steve's Donut House, 624 Admirals. A total of $85 was discovered missing from a cash drawer.

Defence lawyer Victor Simpson argued that Wybert's problem was a psychological one, not a criminal one, and that the youth had gone through a frightening experience being kept in custody the last two weeks.

Judge Gilbert Hogg committed three young men for higher court trial on a joint charge of robbery with threats of violence.

Ronald Gary Hamer, 18, of 1119 McBriar; Keith Allan McKenzie, 19, of 1340 Sussex; and Alan George Peirson, 19, of 3249 Doncaster; were charged in connection with an Aug. 14 incident on Broad Street in which John Hugh Davies lost $60.

William Robert Penner, 20, of Mackenzie, B.C., was described by Crown counsel Robert Mulligan as a young man "out of his element in the big city."

Penner pleaded guilty to breaking into Emchuck Janitor Service, 3016 Jutland, on March 24. He had failed to show up Sept. 12 for his preliminary hearing on the charge.

Judge Harold Alder was told Penner and a another person had been seen in the area on the night of the break-in. During the break-in, $13 cash, six packages of cigarettes, and a $90 calculator was taken.

When questioned by city police, Penner told officers he was to meet the proprietor of the janitorial firm and was leaning on the office door when the lock broke.

Court was told Penner had been convicted of breaking and entering three days before the incident and was given a suspended sentence and nine months probation.

Mulligan agreed with defence lawyer Scott Marshall's submissions that it was an unusual case and said it was in the public interest to place Penner on probation and have him return to Mackenzie.

Also getting a suspended sentence, but with 100 hours of community service work added, was 17-year-old Manfred Joseph Waldhuber, formerly of 3180 Ayton Place.

Waldhuber pleaded guilty Jan. 29 to two counts of breaking and entering and one of theft over $200.

Crown counsel Richard Law informed Allan that Waldhuber and a juvenile broke into a summer cottage at 948 Page Avenue on Jan. 12 and lived there until Jan. 23, when police were called. Waldhuber also admitted breaking into 3181 Ayton Place between Jan. 12 and 23, stealing food.

The theft charge involved a 1969 Volkswagen van, which was taken from a Sooke Road garage. The keys had been left in the vehicle and about $500 damage was done to the undercarriage.

Waldhuber, described as a runaway from home, had no previous adult convictions.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Larry Martin Smith, 31, of 604 Atkins, $750; Clarence Daniel Lander, 30, of 712 Heaslip Place, $400; Patrick William Grogan, 18, of 989 Victoria, $400; Siegfried Bruno Karl, 29, of 107 Government, $400; and Christopher Philip Buchan, 18, of 650 Brookleigh, $50.

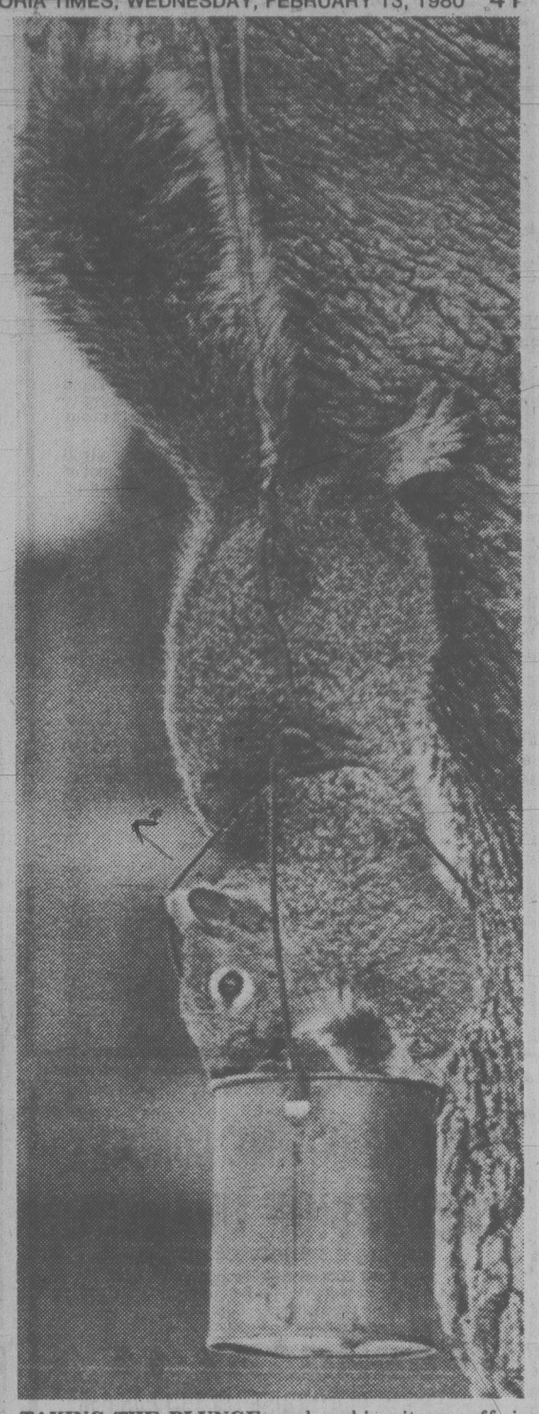
In addition, Karl was fined $400 for dangerous driving and Buchan was ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work and fined an additional $100 for driving while under suspension.

Heritage study brings rewards

Christa Zimakas, a Grade 7 pupil at Norfolk House School, will be recognized at a reception Sunday for a study involving heritage buildings.

She is one of three Norfolk girls who entered a heritage competition sponsored by the Hallmark Society of Victoria. She won a book prize for her historical survey of four old houses and their occupants, including drawings and photographs.

The others were Fiona McCaw, a Grade 6 pupil whose work was displayed last week at Mayfair Mall, and Stephanie Krohn, a Grade 5 student who each will receive a print of a heritage building.



TAKING THE PLUNGE, and making it pay off, is this London, Ont. squirrel whose dexterity allows him to gorge himself. The attraction is sunflower seeds in a pot hanging from a tree in Henry Baker's front yard. Baker says two grey and six black squirrels eat five pounds of seed every six days.

Six-year term on drug count

A 47-year-old man was sentenced in county court Tuesday to six years in the penitentiary for possession of 249 capsules of 6.5-per-cent pure heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

James Donald Cripps was found guilty of the June 20 offence by Judge Peter Millward last week and sentence was put over until Tuesday.

Millward said he didn't accept the idea that courts and society are responsible for Cripps' condition because everyone must accept responsibility for their own acts but neither did he agree that the principle of deterrents of Cripps and others must exclude possible rehabilitation.

He also said there was no direct evidence that Cripps profited by the sale of drugs although that inference can be drawn.

Cripps has a criminal record going back to 1953 mostly for break-ins and possession of stolen property, and was on parole for a five-year term when he committed the latest offence.

In 1968, he was sentenced to 15 years for possession of 50 capsules of heroin for the purpose of trafficking but this was reduced in 1969 by the B.C. Court of Appeal to 10 years.

Crown counsel Gordon Macdonald said it would be an error of law and principle for Judge Millward to impose a lesser sentence.

But defence counsel Mike Hutchison asked that Millward sentence with compassion and understanding and urged a term of less than 10 years.

Cripps' six-year sentence will start after the expiry of his current five-year sentence, for possession of stolen property, in 1982.

Godunov in U.S. debut

CHICAGO (AP) — Soviet ballet dancer Alexander Godunov made his first American stage appearance this week since he bolted from the Bolshoi Ballet in New York six months ago.

Godunov danced with the American Ballet Theater's 40th anniversary gala at the Chicago Civic Opera House.

Godunov danced the pas de deux from Leon Minkus's Don Quixote with ballerina Natalia Makarova. Their performance was punctuated several times by applause and was given a two-minute ovation by the crowd of 3,000.

Godunov left the Bolshoi for political asylum in the U.S. last August but his wife, Bolshoi ballerina Ludmilla Vlasova, returned to the Soviet Union after three days of discussions with American officials at New York's Kennedy International Airport.

Nowhere to dump radioactive slag

VANCOUVER (CP) — Experts testifying in B.C. Supreme Court on Tuesday said there is nowhere to put 5,400 tons of radioactive slag now located in Surrey, a municipality just southeast of Vancouver.

C.R.F. Holdings Ltd. is suing Fundy Chemical International Ltd. and Mark Gerald Smerchanski for alleged misrepresentation in telling the purchaser of a three-acre property in Surrey the pile of slag on the land could be used as fill.

C.R.F. is claiming general damages for alleged fraud and deceit and alleged conspiracy to defraud.

William Rachuk, radiation detection officer at the University of B.C., told Mr. Justice M.R. Taylor disposal was the main problem because Chalk River, Ont., the only disposal site in Canada, was not prepared to take such waste from other provinces.

Rachuk said the suggestion the waste be dumped in the Pacific Ocean is not be practical.

Paul Didyk, fuel manager for the Atomic Energy Control Board, testified there may be little environmental impact in ocean dumping but the effect on fish was unpredictable and such a move might have international implications.

Rachuk testified that radioactivity on the property in Surrey was 20 times the permissable level.

He said the materials should be removed to ensure no significant quantity of thorium, a radioactive element, is left behind.

He said there is currently no site in Canada to dispose of the waste, although removal of 200 barrels from another property formerly owned by C.R.F. principal Court Faessler has been scheduled for the end of 1980 by the Atomic Energy Control Board.

Didyk said the Surrey problem, similar to one in Port Hope and Ottawa, was discovered in 1976 when the board sought to identify all areas with radioactive contamination. Discussions had been held with the provinces regarding sites where radioactive waste could be placed.

Didyk said there was no record of an application by Smerchanski requesting AECB approval to remove the radioactive material.

Evidence debated

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The trial of former Surrey mayor Ed McKitka was delayed Tuesday as lawyers debated admission of certain evidence while the B.C. Supreme Court jury was excluded.

McKitka pleaded not guilty Monday before Justice George Murray to five charges of breach of trust, three charges of demanding a bribe and one charge of using threats and deceit to influence an alderman.

The offences are alleged to have been committed between February and November, 1977.

McKitka was defeated as mayor in November, 1977, and was elected alderman last November.

Silent sirens alarm officials

SURREY (CP) — Emergency Planning Canada is alarmed that this municipality east of Vancouver wants to muzzle its air raid sirens at a time when international tensions are mounting.

The sirens, otherwise known as "attack warning signals" could be crucial to the survival of local residents in a nuclear attack, says Fred Cooper, the emergency program's regional director.

"It would be most unfortunate if Surrey chose to unilaterally opt out of a program designed to protect all Canadians," Cooper said.

Surrey aldermen Garry Watkins said the sirens are designed to defend against "Messerschmitts and Spitfires" and outlived their usefulness.

Council voted last month not to renew agreements with the Canadian Armed Forces to maintain the muncipality's 25-year-old sirens.

Cooper said in a letter that the federal government is reviewing wartime emergency plans and will be updating or replacing the country's 1,700 sirens.

CLIMBING CANINE: Pesky neighborhood cats don't stand a chance when pursued by this high-climbing pooch. Owner Dwayne Connors, 12, of Kitchener, Ont., watches as 2-year-old Snoopy, an Australian cattle dog, goes through some of the aerial routines taught to him by his owners.

Town opposes Kemano dam

VANDERHOOF (CP) — Council in this central B.C. community has come out against the Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd.'s Kemano II hydroelectric project, saying it would drastically affect the nearby Nechako River.

The council passed a resolution Tuesday outlining its criticism of the $800 million project, which Alcan, the parent company, has proposed to power its planned $2.5 billion smelter expansion.

The project requires that the river level be lowered by as much as 90 per cent where it passes through the north end of this muncipality of 2,000, who use the river for drinking water, council said.

The area's ability to expand industrially would also be curtailed by a reduced river flow.

Fish stocks in the Nechako River would be reduced as would the municipality's ability to dispose of sewage, council said. The river valley's recreation potential would be spoiled if the project went ahead, aldermen said.

Meanwhile in Kitimat, Alcan said it will resume its series of information meetings on the project.

The company postponed meetings in Smithers, Houston and Moricetown last week when the new provincial energy policy left the future of Kemano II project in doubt.

All braced for tugboat strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Fraser River is crowded with log booms, longshoremen are bracing for layoffs and river pilots are making contingency plans to dock freighters as everyone waits for tugboat deckhands and cooks to make good their strike threat.

The cooks and deckhands — members of the seaman's local of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers — have been in a legal position to strike since Jan. 25 when they rejected the non-binding contract recommendations of federal conciliator Dr. Noel Hall.

"We'll pick our time," says the veteran labor leader and business agent for Local 400. "Don't get excited, that's the main thing."

The dispute between B.C.'s 12 tugboat companies and the 550 cooks and deckhands rests on bread-and-butter issues: wages, shift differential, safety, the work week and overtime pay.

The union wants a $1.23-an-hour wage increase right away and an additional $1.10 an hour next year. Hall recommended increases of 90 cents an hour in each of two years that would have increased a deckhand's salary to $1,575 a month this year.

The workers also want to lose their status as the only major union in B.C. whose members don't get shift differential; they want improved compensation for on-call duty, and they want noise levels reduced on tugs.

A lengthy strike would tie up two-thirds of the coast and river tugboats and could devastate portions of the province's economy. No heating oil would be shipped to Vancouver Island, no ships would be guided into the Roberts Bank coal port south of here and no wood chips or chemicals would get to coastal lumber mills.

Union members say their biggest fear about the strike is that it will heat up the 30-year-old conflict with the rival Seafarers International Union, which represents about 200 deckhands and cooks. The SIU broke with the mainstream of the labor movement last week and vowed not to support the Brotherhood strike.

The week before that the Seafarers were suspended from the B.C. Federation of Labor for conduct unbecoming to a labor union. The Brotherhood says the Seafarers signed a "sweetheart contract" with a shipping company that intends to take several maritime unions to court to recover losses incurred last summer when one of its ships was idled by pickets.

That contract is identical to one the Brotherhood rejected.

McGrath says the reaction of the Seafarers durjng the inevitable strike is the least of his worries.

"I've got a lot of faith in the labor movement in British Columbia. We don't have to worry about that on any count."

Okanagan faces water shortage

KELOWNA (CP) — Water conservation measures may have to be taken in some Okanagan districts this summer if the rainfall total does not increase soon, Dave Lovdahl, acting manager for the water management branch said Tuesday. The Feb. 1 snow surveys show the Okanagan snowpack is about 56 per cent of the average. This is only slightly higher than the record low pack three years ago.

Girls find body

BURNABY (CP) — The body of Gustav Leander Carlson, 89, was found by two girls Tuesday in a ditch at a construction site in this Vancouver suburb. Carlson had strayed from a Swedish rest home last week. Cause of death was not known but police said they did not suspect foul play.

Tickets invalid

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city stands to lose up to $100,000 in revenue following a provincial court ruling that thousands of Vancouver parking metre tickets issued before Dec. 12, 1979 are invalid. Reg Munro, justice of the peace in charge of Vancouver's traffic court, said that several thousand outstanding tickets, worth a maximum $11 each, will be cancelled. On Friday, provincial court Judge K.A. Smith ruled that the parking space description in the metre bylaw was invalid. City traffic officials warn that tickets issued after Dec. 12, 1979 are valid as Vancouver council amended the description.

Accidents down

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police officers were involved in 213 motor vehicle accidents in 1979 of which 43 were their fault. Cpl. Roger Jacobsen, supervisor of the force's 227 patrol cars, paddy wagons, motorcycles and parking enforcement vehicles, said Tuesday that total accidents were down 9.4 per cent from 1978.

Insanity verdict

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A B.C. Supreme Court jury has found a Penticton woman not guilty of second degree murder by reason of insanity after she told her trial she thought she was hearing evil voices telling her to kill. Barbara Buddingh, 31, had pleaded not guilty to the March 30, 1979, killing of her nine-month-old daughter Melissa. Mr. Justice Douglas E. Andrews committed Buddingh to Riverview Hospital, a mental health institution in Coquitlam.

Religious broadcasting battled before CRTC

OTTAWA (CP) - Religious broadcasting in Vancouver was the focus Tuesday of the first Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission hearing conducted by newly-appointed chairman John Meisel.

The main opposition to Jacobson's plan came from Toronto-based Interchurch Communication, an umbrella group representing the broadcasting units of the Anglican, Baptist, Lutheran, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic and United churches.

The group said the proposed station will be a religious station, contravening long-standing commission policy against licensing commercial religious radio stations.

About 37 hours a week will be devoted to a wide range of religious music and 17 hours to religious discussion.

Jacobson said his would not be a religious station. He said special emphasis will be placed on programming which contributes to solving problems and which helps to strengthen the moral fibre of society.

He received tentative approval from the commission a year ago with the proviso it carry less religious content.

The hearing was called to discuss the revised plan.

12.7% budget hike for Saanich schools

Rising enrolments and higher operating costs are reflected in a $15.12 million budget for Saanich School District.

Chairman Lois Walsh said today the 12.7-per-cent increase represents a catchup in several areas, including acquisition of one additional school bus and replacement of others which was previously deferred.

Walsh said the budget includes hiring of four additional teachers but the net effect is to maintain the pupil-teacher ratio at 21:1 except in Claremont Secondary School.

Claremont, with not quite 600 pupils, has a ratio of between 19:1 and 20:1, which trustees decided was deserved. Two of the new teachers are for Claremont.

Operating costs in the budget represent $13.1 million, an increase of nearly 15 per cent from last year.

Walsh said teaching supplies had gone up in price sharply, making necessary 27 per cent higher allocation. Computer charges will also cost 27 per cent more; insurance and miscellaneous charges 16 per cent, including higher ICBC liability premiums and municipal sewer charges.

Repairs and maintenance will be up 25.7 per cent, including $20,000 for security patrols against vandalism.

Minor equipment repairs will cost 28 per cent more; vehicle maintenance and fuel 25 per cent more, and the cost of acquiring new vehicles 39 per cent more.

The latter is a sum in which the education department does not share. But a 103-per-cent hike in transportation assistance ($58,000) to parents whose children can not use buses, is completely recoverable from the province.

The chairman answered critics who complain about school rentals, which will cost the district an estimated $10,477 this year.

"We get a fair amount of flack from community groups who say they shouldn't be paying for using the schools. They say they've paid for these buildings and should use them free." Walsh said.

Mac-Blo hikes price of newsprint by 8%

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. announced Tuesday price increases of up to eight per cent for standard newsprint effective May 1.

Southwest B.C. and Vancouver Island customers will pay $440 a tonne, up from $408, while B.C. interior and Alberta will pay $456, up from $424, a company spokesman said.

Meanwhile, the company's eastern subsidiary, MacMillan-Rothesay in St. John, N.B., announced similar newsprint price increases for eastern consumers.

Eastern Canadian customers will pay another $32 on the existing price of $408 a tonne and eastern U.S. customers, $440 (U.S.), up from $413.

The company also announced it is pulling out of the Groupement Europeen de la Cellulose (GEC), the Common Market's largest producer of market pulp.

MB's investment in GEC was written off in 1977 and the withdrawal will have no effect on MB's earnings or financial position, the company said.

Heart attack cuts down David Janssen at 49

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Screen actor-TV star David Janssen died of a massive heart attack at his Malibu Beach home today. He was 49.

A family spokesman said the dark-haired star of the TV series, The Fugitive and, more recently, Harry O, suffered a coronary attack about 4 a.m. and was taken to Santa Monica emergency hospital where he was pronounced dead.

His long-time friend and fellow actor, Stuart Whitman, was among the first to know of his death this morning when he drove past the Janssen's beach home at 4:30 a.m. to find paramedic and fire trucks parked at the house.

He said, "I rushed into the house and saw a bunch of men working feverishly to save David's life.

"The finally got his heart going by mechanical means and put him in an ambulance. I took his wife, Dani, to the hosptial where their doctor, Rex Kennamer, said he was dead."

A friend said that on Tuesday Janssen finished his second day of filming in a new TV movie, Father Damien: Leper Priest, and had a quiet dinner at home with his wife before retiring.

Three months ago Janssen estimated he had appeared in more than 100 feature and TV films in a career that began at Universal where he made 32 movies, most of them "B" pictures.

He broke into television in 1957 in the title role of the Richard Diamond series, playing a tough detective. Janssen went on to star in three other series, The Fugitive, Harry O and O'Hara, U.S. Treasury Agent.

In recent years Janssen devoted most of his professional life to TV films. Last year he starred in S.O.S. Titanic, Fear In The City, High Ice and The Golden Gate Murders.

Janssen was born in Naponee, Neb., in 1930, the son of a banker and an aspiring actress. He won a "beautiful baby" contest when he was 6 months old.

Janssen grew up doing movie bit roles while going to school. His mother married Eugene Janssen, a salesman, when David was 8.

At age 9 David made his acting debut as Johnny Weismuller's kid brother in Swamp Fire. At 12 he appeared with Sonia Henie in It's a Pleasure.

The young actor was a prime athlete at Los Angeles' Fairfax High School where he excelled as a pole vaulter, track and basketball flash.

He had hoped to become a professional basketball player when he graduated from high school in 1949 but a knee injury convinced him he would be more successful as an actor.

Janssen joined a summer stock troupe in Ogunquit, Maine, and later worked as a clerk in New York while seeking parts on Broadway.

After a brief stint as a hoofer in an unsuccessful Michael Todd musical, Janssen was signed by 20th Century-Fox which bleached his hair blonde, insisted unsuccessfully on ear surgery and other measures to reduce his resemblence to Gable. The studio finally dropped him because of his Gable image.

His movie career was interrupted by two years in the Army at Ford Ord, Calif., in Special Services.

Janssen married model Ellie Graham in 1959. The childless marriage ended in divorce 10 years later.

He married Dani Greco, ex-wife of entertainer Buddy Greco, about five years ago. Their marriage, too, was childless.

Among Janssen's hit films were "The Green Berets," "Warning Shot," "The Shoes of the Fisherman" and "Marooned."

Janssen, left, with James Whitmore in The Word

Radicals give up

MANILA (Reuter) — Survivors of a fanatical religious sect, who believed themselves invincible to bullets and wield machetes in raids in the Philippines, have surrendered after a weekened clash with police in which 10 sect members died. Members of the Salvatoris sect were estimated to number fewer than 100 and military sources said almost all have been killed, captured or surrendered.

Midnight shaker in Calif.

LAKEPORT, Calif. (AP) — A mild earthquake shook an area of Lake County near the Highlands community on Clear Lake early today, sheriff's deputies say.

Sgt. Robert Kies said no injuries or significant damage was reported following the midnight shaker.

In Berkeley, a spokesman for the University of California Seismographic Station said the quake was not strong enough to set off an alarm. It takes a quake measuring 3.5 to 4 on the Richter scale to sound the alarm, he said.

Residents in the Highlands community, located 130 kilometres north of San Francisco, reported swaying chandeliers and household items being tossed around from the force of the quake.

Roofers blame building code for shake rot

By PAUL MINVIELLE

Members of the West Coast Independent Roofing Association have launched a campaign against National Building Code regulations governing the installation of cedar shake roofs.

Association president Mike Cuvelier of Victoria said the provisions are being enforced without consideration of West Coast conditions, creating a huge headache for roofers and their customers in B.C.

In past, he said, a separate underlay of building paper was put down, and then shakes were applied.

Under the new provisions of the code, there must be alternating rows of paper and shakes.

"This 'interleafing' effect doesn't allow the shakes to 'breathe'," Cuvelier said.

He explained the interleafing regulations have been included in the National Building Code (NBC) for years, but the Lower Mainland and Victoria had been excluded.

He said alternating layers of shakes and building paper prevent wind-driven snow from getting under the shakes, and it was once thought there was no problem in the excluded areas.

But snow and rain problems as well as roof failures have prompted officials to apply the interleafing rule to formerly excluded areas.

Currie feels a contributing factor to current shake roof difficulties is the fact there are a lot of poorly split shakes around. Roof pitches are also less than what they used to be, and installation in some cases isn't up to par.

"If you have good thick shakes properly installed on a roof with a decent pitch, you've got a darn good roof," Currie said.

He said the NBC is being revised for 1980. The province adopts the code as its own, with amendments to take care of particular provincial problems.

Deadline for changes to the code is in a couple of months, with both codes coming out in June or July.

In arguing against the interleafing, Cuvelier referred to research he said indicated that cedar shake roof failure is due to a new fungus.

Dr. Roger Smith, manager of the biodeterioration and protection department of Forintek Canada Corp., said the fungus isn't new. In fact, the problem is soft rot fungi, a group of fungi that gradually eat into any wood, especially under warm, damp conditions.

(Forintek was formerly the Western Forest Products lab that became a private company now funded by the federal and provincial governments and private industry.)

Smith said if cedar shakes and shingles aren't allowed to dry off, rot will be accelerated. He believes the interleafing would hamper that drying.

Everybody agrees the problem is costly.

Smith said the total value of cedar roofing material produced in B.C. alone exceeds $100 million.

"If we can double the life expectancy of a roof, it would be a tremendous saving," Smith said.

For this reason, Forintek research has come up with preservatives for cedar roofs that can double the current life expectancy (10 to 20 years) of western red cedar shake roofs.

These recommendations will form the basis of the shake and shingle roof standard (Canadian Standards Association 0118.1) being published this year.

The Western Red Cedar Single and Shake Bureau of Seattle (which funded part of Forintek's research) is cautiously predicting a 40-year life span for a treated roof, but Smith feels that's being ultra cautious.

"I see no reason why a properly treated and installed roof shouldn't last at least 40 years or more. It should last a lifetime."

The question remains, will interleafing as ordered by the building code enhance the durability of that same roof?

Expenses obstruction?

The chairman of the legislature's public accounts committee says finance ministry officials are obstructing the committee's work by withholding information.

Ernie Hall (NDP — Surrey) is seeking the 1979-80 travel expense records of Premier Bill Bennett, Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy, Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe, former energy minister Jack Davis and a number of former employees in Bennett's office, including Dan Campbell, former intergovernmental relations director, and John Arnett, Bennett's former press agent.

The requests have all been turned down by comptroller-general Lionel Bonnell who says the information cannot be released because the leislature is not in session and the public accounts committee has no power between sessions.

Letters to Hall from Bonnell and Finance Minister Hugh Curtis concur that there is no precedent for examination of the public accounts and related items except when the committee sits, usually during a legislature session.

Hall says their decision is "a clear attempt to stifle the process of open public review of government expenditure."

He said the House is technically still in session, even though members adjourned last August.

GVLRA to ask board to stay

Greater Victoria school board will be asked to reconsider its decision to leave the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, Saanich mayor Mel Couvelier said Tuesday.

The GVLRA will meet trustees soon in an attempt to talk the board out of parting ways with the joint bargaining unit, said Couvelier, association chairman.

No date has been set for the meeting.

The board decided several months ago to try solo negotiations with non-teaching staff in 1981.

But the GVLRA will bargain for the board until a decision is made by the B.C. Labor Relations Board, which must approve the application for withdrawal from the association.

During a Tuesday meeting the GVLRA also approved adding a statement of objectives to the consititution pledging to improve public service to the area while "providing fair and reasonable salaries and working conditions."

B.C. jobless jump disgraceful: NDP

The increase in unemployment in B.C. during January is disgraceful, opposition labor critic Karen Sanford (NDP — Comox) said Tuesday.

Statistics Canada reported 119,000 people out of work in B.C. — the highest total in the province's history — as the seasonally adjusted rate rose to 8.0 per cent from 7.3 per cent in December.

Statistics Canada said employment declined by 18,000 during the month because of seasonal patterns but the provincial labor force "unexpectedly rose by 14,000 persons."

Mrs. Sanford said the number of layoffs in the forest industry, "unprecedented since the 1930s, have resulted in severe hardship for many regions of the province."

She cited as an example the jump in the unemployment rate on Vancouver Island to 12.6 per cent in January from 8.8 per cent in December.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT

Opening lead — five of spades.

The rule of playing second-hand-low on defense is generally sound practice, but, as with all generalities, you shouldn't allow the rule to dominate your thinking.

West led a spade, won by South with the ten. With only eight tricks in sight, it was obvious to declarer that his most promising source for a ninth lay in hearts. Accordingly, he played a heart and finessed the eight after West followed low.

East won with the jack — he could have saved a trick by ducking — and returned a spade. Eventually South scored ten tricks consisting of four hearts, two spades, two diamonds and two clubs.

But West could have beaten the contract by playing the queen on the first heart lead. To do so could not cost him a trick. If South had the jack, dummy's five hearts were all tricks, while if East had the jack, the queen play might hold dummy to two tricks. Declarer could not have recovered from the queen play. Restricted to two tricks in each suit, he eventually would have gone down one.

It is true that a defender usually follows low when he is second-hand, and rarely plays a high card in order to force a higher one from dummy. But here the queen is clearly the right play. West can easily assume that if he plays low on the first heart lead declarer will also play low from dummy.

It follows that if it is to declarer's advantage to play the eight after West plays the five, it must be correspondingly disadvantageous for West to allow him to do so. He should therefore put up the queen.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 7799 for the game today. Two 7s and two 9s. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols and no words. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also powers and roots.

Start right with begonias; get to root of the matter

hilda beastall

As with all tubers and bulbs grown for vegetable or flower, it is the roots of tuberous begonias that are the most important new growth in spring. The better the roots, the better will be the top growth of foliage and flowers later.

To get an early start with the roots on new tubers, the home gardener watches for the first ads of their arrival at nurseries and stores.

Most begonias are imported from Europe. Belgium and Holland were for years the chief suppliers.

When newly arrived locally, begonia tubers are in good condition. As usual, it pays to check for firm heavy tubers, with lively crowns but not started top shoots.

The aim of gardeners in this coastal climate of slow starts for warmth-loving flowering plants is to get a four-inch pot filled or nearly filled with healthy roots before setting the begonias out around the end of May. The plants are lovely for patio tubs, balcony planters, the shady spots on sundecks as well as in garden beds.

This early start allows two full months for rooting slowly but steadily at moderate indoor temperatures and followed by the month of May to develop a bud or two among healthy leaves of no more than five to six-inch height.

Begonia tubers respond most readily when placed for rooting in a shallow dish of dampened peatmoss. First dampen the peat by stirring some in a can or a pail, according to quantity, using warm water. It is more quickly absorbed than is cold water. Stir with a garden hand fork until peat is thoroughly dampened.

Spread about 1½ inches deep in the shallow pan and place where temperature will be a steady 16 to 18 deg. C. When the peat feels no longer chilly to the hand, set the tubers down into the peat at least one inch apart.

Don't cover the crown but have the peat up to the rim since roots often emerge later at that point as well as from the base.

The spacing between the tubers is for occasional renewal of moisture; water must not be splashed over the crowns or the swelling buds may rot before they develop.

Use tepid water when it is needed, to prevent change of temperature at root level, and never overwater for it must be remembered that the tuber is capable of storing moisture and thus is liable to rot.

A place without much light can be used for the first week or so, even as long as three weeks if no top growth has been made. Lift a tuber or two after 10 days. If a wad of damp peat comes up with them, you may be able to see signs of roots. Don't disturb these tender roots. Leave the peat attached.

Have ready the clean four-inch pots with crock or uneven stones over the drainage holes to allow excess water to escape but to retain the soil. Use leafmould, light compost, and some sand or perlite to prevent packing.

The mixture should be at room temperature before using. Hold a rooted tuber so that its top is almost an inch from top of pot. Fill in beneath and around, gently, with soil mixture. Do not cover the crown.

A smart tap of the bottom of the pot on bench or table will settle the soil around the roots. There should be just under an inch of space at the surface for watering when required.

When the growth is seen coming from the top of the tubers, put the pot at once into strong daylight without direct sunlight all day, but sun at intervals will help to keep the new shoots healthy. Temperature should be steady with the slight drop at night.

Most important is to keep soil moisture to a minimum without it becoming dry. Begonia tubers make stronger growth when treated with moderation in the early stages of growth indoors.

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Ten persons were killed Tuesday when police attacked leftists holding a political party headquarters and clashed with radical high school students parading after they ended their occupation of the education ministry.

The Spanish government expressed fears the police will also use force to try to end the leftist occupation of its embassy.

Four militants and a policeman were killed when police stormed the Christian Democratic party headquarters Tuesday to rescue 10 hostages held since Jan. 29 by about 100 members of the Feb. 28 Popular Leagues, or LP-28.

The militants were demanding the resignation of the two Christian Democratic members of the junta headed by two colonels who ousted President Carlos Humberto Romero Oct. 15.

The police said they decided to break the stalemate after the leftists in the party headquarters shot and killed a policeman in a passing truck. When the police attacked, there was a heavy exchange of fire for several minutes. Then the police brought up three armored cars, and the leftists surrendered.

Five high school students were killed earlier in the day when shooting erupted during a "victory march" after about 100 teenagers ended their week-long occupation of the education ministry and freed 12 hostages.

The students were celebrating because they said the junta met their demands for a tuition cut at private colleges, expanded enrolment in the state university and the firing of some officials of the ministry.

The students said police surrounded the march and began firing without provocation. But the police said "terrorists" among the marchers attacked a truckload of soldiers.

At the Spanish Embassy, which LP-28 members have been occupying for a week, the militants released Ambassador Victor Sanchez Mesa Tuesday night but said they will continue to hold five other hostages, all Spaniards, until their demands are met.

Sanchez Mesa, who has a history of heart trouble, was put under observation at a hospital. There was a report that he had a "medical crisis" Tuesday, but the militants said they freed him "to show our good faith and not for medical reasons."

LP-28 said it will continue to occupy the embassy until the junta releases five of its members plus all persons arrested during the disturbances Tuesday. The government has released 11 of 16 LP-28 members whose freedom was demanded but says it has no information on the other five.

There was no word on the progress of negotiations between the junta and LP-28. But the attack on the Christian Democratic party headquarters raised fears in Madrid that the police will storm the Spanish Embassy despite the junta's pledge not to use force.

Five members of the staff of the Spanish embassy in Guatemala City were among 37 persons who burned to death Jan. 31 when police started to shoot their way into that embassy to end a takeover by militant peasants.

OAU springs $10M for Rhodesian vote

ADDIS ABABA (Reuter) — The Organization of African Unity (OAU) is giving $10 million to Rhodesian nationalist leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo to finance their election campaigns, informed sources said today.

The sources said the money will be divided equally between the two leaders — who were linked in the Patriotic Front while their guerrillas were fighting against the Salisbury administration, but who are fighting the elections separately.

The voting is in two weeks, and the OAU Council of Ministers is calling on Britain to ensure it is free and fair.

The 49-member Council of Ministers will meet in special session one week after the elections to decide whether they were fair and acceptable to black Africa.

If the OAU is dissatisfied with the elections, the question of applying diplomatic and economic sanctions to Britain will be discussed, the sources said.

In Rhodesia, meanwhile, two African women were reported wounded when a bus came under small arms fire about 50 kilometres north of Salisbury, a Rhodesian military spokesman said today.

The attack was the closest such incident to the capital since a fragile ceasefire took effect more than six weeks ago.

There was no immediate indication whether the passengers, who were all African, were supporters of Nkomo. The attackers escaped under cover of darkness.

Last week 16 people were killed and 64 were wounded when a bus driving to Salisbury from the eastern city of Umtali was hit by rocket and machinegun fire near Rusape, 160 km from the capital.

$700M study set on N-waste dump

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter proposed on Tuesday the first co-ordinated effort in the United States to store nuclear waste, planning to spend $700 million to examine salt domes and other sites in the South and West as potential radioactive dumps.

Sending his proposal to Congress, the president said the government would study about 11 sites where the poisonous by-products of nuclear power, weapons tests and medical research could be hidden at no risk to the environment.

But questions remain as to whether the wastes, especially spent fuel from commercial reactors and government weapons programs, can be stored safely. The highly radioactive materials could have a life of from 1,000 to 300,000 years.

"A technical consensus exists among experts that no insurmountable barriers are known" to prevent the safe storage, said Carter's domestic policy adviser, Stuart Eizenstat.

But one of the papers the White House distributed in support of the program said that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission "is determining whether or not it has confidence that radioactive wastes can be disposed of safely."

Inflation even felt at Eton

LONDON (AP) — The boys at Eton, the British boarding school for the sons of the rich, are protesting against a tuition hike that may empty the pockets of even their upper crust parents.

"There must be a limit to what the majority of parents can afford," said an unsigned editorial last week in the school newspaper, Eton College Chronicle, which is written by students.

The scholars have asked the school to allow families to "pay what they can" towards the yearly bill of $7,182, more than the charge for room, board and tuition at most U.S. universities.

The fees crisis didn't happen overnight. For years, the school has been in serious financial trouble.

In 1976, the unthinkable happened — Eton's 1,200 boys began making their own beds as well as dusting and sweeping their rooms as an economy measure.

Worse, a recent Eton study showed that the "old school tie" doesn't work as well as it did — a place at the top people's school no longer guarantees a top job.

In the latest blow, Eton provost Lord Charteria announced to parents in a letter that the annual tuition would be increased by almost $1,400.

Inflation, debt imperil Israel

By JAY BUSHINSKY
The Atlanta Constitution

TEL AVIV, Israel — Political scientists contend that nations can never go broke, but Israel may be the exception unless its spirited new finance minister or his immediate successors can rescue the Jewish state's economy from runaway inflation, a widening trade gap and an awesome national debt.

Ironically, these economic ailments are largely due to the sudden advent of peace with Egypt rather than to the cost of waging wars or trying to ward off potential attackers. They can also be blamed on a lopsided job structure with too few Israelis engaged in export industries and too many in civil service — either in government or public institutions.

In numerical terms, the problem boils down to a $4 billion negative balance of trade, a $15 billion national debt and an inflation rate that climbed 111.4 percent in 1979.

These are the conditions that face Finance Minister Yigal Hurvitz, a no-nonsense politician whose slogan — which he uses to thwart fellow cabinet members demanding bigger budgets as well as strikers seeking higher pay — is simply, "There is no money."

On that basis, Hurvitz managed to block his colleagues' attempts to enlarge the $14 billion government budget for next year while simultaneously ignoring a 24-hour strike in late January that paralyzed the country's international airport, harbors and industries.

The strikers were particularly angry about Hurvitz's determination "to cut the raw flesh," a painful process by which he has eliminated subsidies on virtually all foodstuffs, increased utility rates and generally reduced the average wage earner's purchasing power. This is to be followed by measures designed to trim the government payroll, which will mean at least 30,000 jobless Israelis within the coming year.

Economists blame Prime Minister Menachem Begin for unwittingly making an already bad economic situation worse by failing to consider the financial consequences of the Camp David accords. "He did not have an economist with him during the talks," complained Avraham Shavit, head of the manufacturers' association and chief of El Al Israel Airlines.

The results are reflected in the soaring outlays for oil and the colossal debt to the U.S. for construction of new air force bases in the Negev desert to replace those in the Sinai that are being handed over to Egypt. In addition, Israel has had to bear the staggering expense of removing its massive military infrastructure from Sinai and recreating it in the Negev.

Until the Camp David accords began to take effect (1978 was the cutoff year during which Israel was still able to pump 20 per cent of its oil from offshore wells in the Gulf of Suez), this country spent $700 million a year for imported oil.

In 1979, with the evacuation of the Alma field and price increases on the international market, Israel spent $1.4 billion. The oil outlay in 1980 is expected to be at least $2 billion.

Throughout the post-1973 war years, Israel continued to allocate 30 per cent of its gross national product to military defense requirements. And at the same time increases in the cost of imported products far outstripped the prices it could fetch abroad for exported goods.

The former Labor government was able to hold the inflation rate at a maximum of 40 per cent while refusing for ideological reasons to tolerate a substantial unemployment rate as required by the economic situation.

It managed to substantially reduce its trade gap through 1977 but could not check the inflation rate.

Israel's only recourse now, the economists say, is to achieve a breakthrough in existing and potential export markets so as to cover the new oil expenditures and to repay the U.S. for the loans obtained to build the Negev bases.

The latter obligation is regarded by El Al's Shavit as Begin's biggest mistake — accepting a loan instead of seeking a grant. "We are handing over 11 Sinai airfields, including three sophisticated air bases, free of charge and are borrowing money from the U.S. to replace them in the Negev," Shavit complained.

The burly, plain-talking executive has unbounded faith in his country's economic stamina. Shavit refers to the industrial and agricultural development in the nation during the 32 years of its independence as "the Israeli miracle," no less worthy of international admiration than West Germany's post-World War II economic recovery.

He proudly ticked off the export figures for 1979, contrasting them with those of 1948: "We began with $80 million worth of sales, mainly oranges, and reached $9 billion in exports last year, half of it in industrial products.

Begin's acceptance of a $4 billion package for the air bases, of which $1.8 billion was a grant, was termed inflationary by Shavit. He argued that the grant will not even cover the interest and insisted that Israeli firms could have done the job just as well as the U.S. contractors engaged for the projects.

His main gripe about Hurvitz is over the finance minister's freeze on credit for local industrialists, a move that is hampering rather than promoting exports, he said.

With a national election scheduled for next year, the opposition Labor Party has been monitoring the Begin government's economic policies with a sharp eye on voter impact. And what with the staggering rise in the cost of living — officially pegged at 111.4 percent for 1979 — and consequent drop in living standards, Laborite politicians are sure they could win on the pocketbook issue alone.

Inventor plugs his Microcar

By FRED FERRETTI
New York Times

NEW YORK — "What's it good for?" asked Stuart Pivar incredulously, looking somewhat put off because the quintessence of his Moped-inspired electric Microcar was not immediately comprehended by his audience.

"This is what it's good for," he said. "The concept of an electric car is this. If you're a housewife you drive your husband to the station. That's three miles round trip. You park in the driveway and plug the charger into the electric cord hanging out of the dining room window. You go shopping, that's five miles. You come back home, plug in. You go to pick up your daughter to take her to ballet school. That's four miles. You come back and plug in. You could go on forever."

"That's what the Microcar is all about," he said.

Not all, for the oddly shaped "urban vehicle," as Pivar calls it, is more than just a litany of plug-ins.

As designed by him and two engineers, it is an alternative energy car that looks exactly like a three-dimensional D. It weighs only 300 pounds, sits on three Moped-style wheels and is steered, braked and given power surges through levers attached to a pair of handlebars.

It is built of steel tubing, can seat two, and it has more than two cubic feet of storage space beneath the seat and in back. Its body is molded polyethylene and it can be completely enclosed with snap-on vinyl roof and side panels. It contains a plug-in space heater and a recharger, and it has a single headlight. Only the front wheel has a chrome cover. Beneath a rubber-covered floor panel sit the two "deep-discharge" marine batteries that power the Microcar. The pair cost $50 each, but replacement at retail cost would be about $150, according to Pivar. But, he says, "They wouldn't have to be replaced for at least two years."

It is a tiny car, only six and a half feet long and three feet wide and it will fit, as Pivar demonstrated, quite nicely between two legally parked cars.

Best of all, he says, is the cost. The electric Microcar will sell for $1,600, not much more than a motorcycle. It has two drawbacks, according to Pivar. In a high wind it tends to skew about a bit, and it has trouble climbing hills. But, he says, "If you live in flat country and you don't drive where the wind chill factor is a real factor, you're in good shape."

A test ride in Manhattan traffic demonstrated that the Microcar is a peppy, somewhat uncomfortable vehicle. But it is cheap transportation. Pivar estimates that its daily cost of operation would be about one-half cent per mile, which he asserts is equivalent to 250 miles to a gallon of gasoline.

"What I really do for a living is collect art," he says. "My West 67th Street apartment is filled with 19th-century paintings and sculpture." He says he also owns the Rototron Plastics Company in Farmingdale, N.Y., which makes, among other things, plastic garbage pails. American Microcar Inc. is also in Farmingdale.

About three years ago, Pivar and his two engineers began experimenting with lightweight city-use vehicles. They came up with a gasoline version of the Microcar that is identical, except that it is powered by a tiny starter engine and has a three-gallon gas tank and gets 75 miles to the gallon. There are 1,000 of the gas versions on the road throughout the country, he says, and they cost $1,300 each.

But with the energy crisis and the spiralling rise in the cost of gasoline, Pivar, who is 49 years old and talks recurringly about a "sense of mission," said he had decided to abandon the gasoline engine and "go electric."

Candu is best: U.K. study

LONDON (CP) — Canada's Candu nuclear reactor system is the best in the world and should be adopted in Britain, says a study released Tuesday.

The study by a science research unit at Sussex University said the Candu heavy-water system has a number of advantages over the large pressurized water reactors proposed by the British government.

Steve Thomas, co-author of the report, said the study analysed the performance of nuclear plants around the world on the basis of type and size and the Canadian system was rated number one.

"In terms of performance and efficiency, Britain should be looking at the Candu instead of large PWRs," he said.

"The Candu system doesn't have a giant pressure vessel and the associated risks of a catastrophic failure. The reaction is carried out in large tubes."

A spokesman for Britain's energy department refused to comment on the report.

A spokesman for the Central Generating Eletricity Board said the former Labor government abandoned plans for a steam-generated heavy water reactor based on the Candu system after a three-year reassessment was completed in January, 1978.

"It concluded that it would be the most expensive way of developing Britain's nuclear program, more expensive than either relaunching a program of gas-cooled reactors or building American-designed pressurized water reactors."

The first pressurized water reactor is scheduled to be built in Britain in 1982, with the electricity supply board ordering one new power station a year until 1992. Cost estimates of the 15,000-megawatt project have varied between $26 billion and $50 billion.

The study said the least effective nuclear system is the boiling water reactors, with Britain's steam-generated heavy water reactors second worst with more than 700 hours of down time a year. The pressurizd water reactors were judged second best with more than 500 hours of down time.

The report found the Candu system was best with an average annual time of 300 hours out of action.

With the exception of the Candu plant in Rajasthan, India, Candu reactors were found to become more effective and reliable as operating experience increases, the report said.

Thatcher's son called a traitor to 'Buy British'

LONDON (AP) — Denounced as "Britain's Billy Carter," Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's son Mark joined the Duke of Kent on the hate list of the British clothing industry today for hiring out as a model for Japanese textiles.

"If my mother is embarrassed, I will be extremely upset," said the 26-year-old racing car driver with movie-star good looks.

"I don't know what her attitude will be, but she will doubtless see my point of view."

"He is a private individual entitled to do what he wants," said a spokesman for the prime minister's office. "We do not speak for him."

The anger of the British clothing industry was reported on the front pages of newspapers and at least one newspaper gave young Thatcher an editorial spanking.

Said The Daily Express: "His mother has problems enough without him compounding them and dragging her into disrepute, like a British version of Billy Carter," referring to President Carter's maverick brother.

Mark, whose father is a millionaire businessman, said he was forced into modelling for Kanebo textiles of Japan because no British company would sponsor a $26,500 racing tour in the Far East that he is planning.

"The reactions I got were of complete disinterest bordering on the rude," he said.

"Now, if a Japanese company approaches me, I don't see why I should not accept their sponsorship."

However, Mark's venture into modelling for the Japanese coincides with a "Buy British" ad campaign to get more Britons to buy home-made goods instead of imports from such places as Japan. And the worst hit by imports has been the slumping textile and clothing industry.

Just last month, the smartly dressed Duke of Kent — cousin of the Queen — was rebuked for buying some of his suits in Hong Kong. The Sunday Mirror dubbed him the "Cut Price Duke."

The British Clothing Manufacturers Federation said young Thatcher's modelling contract was "shameful."

U.S. hostage free after 3 years

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Three years after he was kidnapped by guerrillas in a South American jungle, U.S. Peace Corps worker Richard Starr is coming home. He was released after columnist Jack Anderson paid a $250,000 ransom.

Bob Sherman, a staff reporter for Anderson, said the ransom was taken to Colombia last weekend by Jack Mitchell, another Anderson associate.

Anderson, who had become involved at the request of former representative Lloyd Meeds of Washington state, was unavailable for comment.

Meeds, a lawyer, declined to give details, except to say: "It's one of those terrible cloak-and-dagger things. You can't believe the channels and the angles that have been used to get that young man out of there."

Starr, a 33-year-old biologist from Edmonds, Wash., was working at a research station about 130 kilometres southeast of Bogota when about 50 guerrillas attacked and took him and several others hostage.

Although the state department said Starr had not been the raiders' specific target, the guerrillas issued a communique five months later calling him a CIA agent.

The U.S. embassy denied that and said he had been researching ways to improve crop yields.

During his captivity, Starr went on long treks with the guerrillas, slept in jungle huts, and ate food of little nutritional value, said Gen. Luis Enrique Rodriguez of the Colombian army.

In a telephone interview, Rodriquez said Starr arrived Monday by horseback at Vegalarga, a jungle village 300 km from Bogota. By Tuesday, he had made it to the Panama Canal Zone.

Rodriguez gave few details, but said Starr received medical attention and that it appears he suffered during his ordeal.

The U.S. embassy in Bogota, confirming only that Starr was free, refused comment on who the negotiators were or if ransom was paid. It was known, however, that Mitchell arrived there Saturday with $250,000 in a suitcase.

Sherman said Anderson borrowed the money and intends to repay it through a public call for donations.

Russian tanks go to PLO?

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli military sources said on Tuesday that the Soviet Union has supplied about 60 tanks and other armored equipment to the Palestine Liberation Organization to strengthen guerrilla forces in southern Lebanon. The PLO denied the report.

Meanwhile, Palestinians and leftist Moslems exchanged artillery fire with Israeli-backed Christian militias in the third consecutive day of shelling in southern Lebanon. The Lebanese government decided to send Prime Minister Salim el Hoss and a top-level delegation to Damascus on Wednesday in a fresh effort to persuade Syrian President Hafez Assad to call off a planned withdrawal of 5,000 peacekeeping troops from Beirut.

The Israeli sources said the Soviets supplied T-34 tanks equipped with 85 millimetre guns and said it was unusual for Moscow to transfer the weapons directly to the PLO. The leader of the Christian militias in southern Lebanon said earlier that Syria supplied the tanks.

The sources said the PLO also received several armored personnel carriers and mobile artillery pieces with a range of six to nine kilometres, the sources said.

Crude leak at Valdez

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Several hundred barrels of crude oil have leaked from the trans-Alaska pipeline at its Port of Valdez terminal, and created a light sheen of oil on the water.

A small drain fitting failed on a 122-centimetre valve in the terminal pipeline system, but has been fixed, said Sam Akin, spokesman for Alyeska Pipeline Service Co.

Boy finds part of missing 'D.B. Cooper' loot

Times News Services

WASHINGTON - An eight-year-old boy out hiking with his family along the Columbia River last Sunday suddenly stumbled across 12 stacks of moldering money — part of the $200,000 that the notorious airline hijacker "D.B. Cooper" made off with more than eight years ago, the FBI said Tuesday.

With the bills now having been traced definitely to the Cooper loot, 30 agents from the Portland and Seattle FBI offices have begun an extensive search of the area for more of the money — and possibly some sign of Cooper or, more likely, his remains.

The money — "several thousand dollars," according to one official — was found about eight kilometres northwest of the Interstate 5 bridge that spans the Columbia and separates Washington from Oregon, FBI agent William M. Baker told a news conference in Portland.

Discovery of the money by Brian Ingram — son of Harold Dwayne Ingram, 27, of Vancouver, Wash., and his wife, Patricia, 26 — marked the latest twist in the bizarre saga of the now-legendary Cooper, who parachuted from a Northwest Airlines jetliner on Thanksgiving Eve, 1971, never to be seen or heard from again.

When found by young Ingram, the stacks of $20 bills were bound by decomposing rubber bands, the FBI said. But there was "no trace of D.B. Cooper," according to the agency.

Shortly after the hijacking, a cult sprang up around D.B. Cooper, a name that never has been traced to its origins.

A private club was named in his honor, D.B. Cooper T-shirts were manufactured, bumper stickers were run off and anniversary parties were held.

Baker said in Portland that whether Cooper got away with the rest of the money was an open question.

Law enforcement authorities have long believed that Cooper died in his plunge from the Boeing 727 because he was wearing only a business suit and street shoes when he jumped into a howling wind and freezing rain with an unreliable parachute. It has been estimated that he hit the ground at a speed of 80 to 120 km/h.

The saga began when "Cooper" boarded the jetliner in Portland for an evening flight to Seattle. Once airborne, he demanded that the airline have $200,000 in $20 bills and three parachutes on hand when the plane landed in Seattle. He threatened to blow up the planeif his demands were not met.

The airline complied, providing the parachutes and money. However, the FBI said Tuesday that the serial numbers of the bills had been recorded.

Cooper permitted the airliner's 36 passengers to leave the plane in Seattle. He then ordered the crew to take the plane to Reno and told the pilot to fly at a relatively low altitude and to open the plane's rear stairway.

The crew members last heard his voice on the plane's intercom when they were over the Washington-Oregon border. They said they believed he jumped, using the least reliable parachute.

The decomposed money was found 26 to 32 km from the jump site by the Ingrams' older son, Brian. The bills were partly buried in sand that the Ingrams were scooping out to build a fire.

"Here's some more wood for the fire, Daddy," the father recalled his son as saying.

"It wasn't wood," Ingram said. "He (Brian) thought we had struck it rich."

Ingram said he assumed the bills might be part of the Cooper money. He turned them over to the FBI, adding with a smile that the money was so decomposed "I couldn't have spent it."

In leafing through the rotting bills, Baker said, the FBI made about "nine or 10 immediate hits" — matches with the numbers of the missing money. The bills were flown to Washington for further analysis and tests by the FBI laboratory.

An FBI official said the packaging and number sequence of the recovered bills indicated that they had not been separated and "are in much the same order as when they were given to the hijacker."

The initial search, confined to the immediate area, turned up "fragments of more money" — nothing more, Baker said. He said the money appeared to have washed up on the bank.

Once that search is completed, probably by this afternoon, a scaled-down number of agents will move upstream, continuing the hunt.

Law enforcement officials in the Pacific Northwest have theorized that Cooper's body is at the bottom of Lake Merwin, 48 km north of Portland, or that his bones are so entangled in giant wild blackberry bushes that they will never be found.

Ralph Himmelsbach, the FBI agent who has worked on the hijacking since it took place, said the money probably had been washed downstream from a Columbia tributary in Washington. But he said he doubted that it came from the Lewis River, the tributary that flows out of Lake Merwin.

Garbo really in espionage

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Greta Garbo, the Swedish actress once cast as the spy Mata Hari, had a real-life role in Second World War espionage for the British Secret Service, a Swedish newspaper has reported.

The Expressen said Tuesday that Garbo helped refugees, including nuclear physicist Niels Bohr, escape parts of Nazi-occupied Europe during the war.

The report was based on the findings of American author Charles Higham, who claimed Garbo first became involved with the British secret service in 1939 through her contacts with Hungarian film director Alexander Korda.

GARBO

Korda acted as a middleman for the British during the war and recruited various influential people to assist in their war effort, Higham told the newspaper.

Expressen said that over a two-year period Higham investigated the subject using war-time documents, including more than 1,000 files declassified by the U.S. government.

Garbo served as a go-between for British agents and influential individuals in neutral Sweden, including shipping magnate Axel Johnson and members of the Swedish royal family, Expressen said.

The actress, a recluse since her retirement from film making, also was credited with obtaining the release of several prominent people in occupied Europe, the newspaper reported.

B.C. liquor kickbacks probed

By DEREK SIDENIUS

The RCMP today confirmed an investigation is under way into allegations of kickbacks and political payoffs involving distilleries and wineries in B.C.

Superintendent Bob Mollach, head of the RCMP's commercial crime unit in Vancouver, said the investigation, is being carried out by Inspector Doug Linfield.

It began nearly three years ago and involves "virtually everyone in the industry", Mollach said.

He said the probe was originally requested by the attorney-general's ministry following confidential reports of an investigation into distillery practices in Quebec.

That investigation culminated last month in bribery charges against 26 distilleries and wineries across Canada, including Alberta Distillers of Vancouver.

The television program said practices between distillers and politicians which the Quebec crime commission described as shameless and despicable have been going on in virtually every province in Canada.

It said liquor company executives testified before the commission that for decades they had been forced to make payments to the fund raisers of the political party in power in Quebec if they wanted to do business with the Quebec liquor board.

The board has since been restructured and renamed the Quebec Liquor Corp.

Documents seized in more than 200 raids by police across the country included cancelled cheques made out by liquor companies for the provincial wings of all three major political parties.

The program said a raid on Alberta Distillers in Vancouver showed the Social Credit party to be the one of the beneficiaries.

Alberta president Charles McConville, however, said in an interview today his company has not given contributions to political parties in recent years.

HEART FUND drive on Vancouver Island kicks off — appropriately — Thursday, Valentine's Day. Vancouver Island campaign chairman George Holmes, shown here with Kimberly Wild, the B.C. Heart Foundation's 1980 Heart Child for the island, will lead a team of volunteers in drive to raise $275,000. The money's really needed — young Kimberly, daughter of Bill and Debbie Wild, of CFB Esquimalt, has had open heart surgery twice in her four-year life. Dental plan to fight 12% increase in fees

By BRENDA DALGLISH

A spokesman for the largest carrier of prepaid dental plans in B.C. said today it will fight a 12 per cent fee hike by dentists right down the line.

The fee hike was announced this week by the College of Dental Surgeons.

David Scherk, general Manager of CU & C Health Services, said the organization is seeking legal advice about charging the college under the Combines Act.

"It's obvious the provincial government does not want to take the dentists on," he said.

"What we're trying to do is break up a very powerful monopoly," Scherk said.

CU & C handles dental plans for almost every major industry in the province and covers about 400,000 B.C. residents.

Last year CU & C paid about $31 million to dentists in the province, said Scherk.

It's a non-profit society established in 1966 when the province's first dental plan began.

Scherk said CU & C has been trying without success to get the College of Dental Surgeons to negotiate a fee schedule with it.

"There's really only two people that can tackle the college. It's up to the government or us," he said.

"We kept thinking the province was going to step in but it seems apparent that they won't.

"We've had three appointments arranged with the health minister and each time they've cancelled," he claimed.

The last one, he said, was Friday when Health Minister Rafe Mair told CU & C it was "inappropriate to discuss Denticare at this time".

"We kept expecting the government to tackle this but now it appears that a deal has been made between the two (the college and the ministry) to preserve the status quo," Scherk said.

Asked why the provincial government is reluctant to consider CU & C's charges, he said: "My speculation is that they don't want to take on the dentists at this time,"

Scherk said two recent decisions, one against a bar association and one against a provincial college of physicians and surgeons, under the Combines Act have led CU & C to consider Combines action.

The decision on whether to lay charges will be made within the next two or three weeks after the society's solicitor has an opportunity to do the necessary legal research.

Scherk said insurance companies actually benefit in the long-term by having medical and dental costs go up and therefore are not interested in opposing increasing rates.

"If we were interested in maximizing our own bureacracy, it would be good business for us to get dental costs up."

He said CU & C has come under pressure recently from Vancouver and District Dental Society president Dr. Egon Nikolai, who sent a letter to dentists suggesting dentists bill their patients covered by CU & C directly rather than bill CU & C.

Garry Winters, president of the Victoria and District Dental Society, confirmed today he has received a copy of Nikolai's letter but the society doesn't have a stated policy on the matter yet.

"It's an alternative if CU & C tries to push its ideas through," Winters told the Times.

Greed risks roe trade?

Fisheries Association of B.C. (FABC) president Jerry Spitz said today the collapse of the roe market in Japan makes it imperative that more realistic prices be paid if the industry is to survive.

And a spokesman for a major Japanese importer also said the rich roe bonanza for B.C. fishermen and processors is over because Japanese consumers have balked at an asking price of around $60 a pound.

The spokesman asked that he and his company not be identified because of the embarassing losses the company has suffered.

When the new herring roe season starts around March 5, the spokesman predicted B.C. fishermen will get only a small fraction of the $5,000 a ton paid in last year's chaotic market.

Spitz agrees.

"I think we all expected it (the collapse of the Japanese market) to happen," he said.

"The Japanese importers — they set the market and they guessed wrong."

At the negotiations which began today between the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union (UFAWU), the Native Brotherhood of British Columbia and the FABC, the fishermen were asking $3,500 a ton for gillnet-caught fish, up $2,300 a ton from last year. A price of $2,100 a ton for seine catches is being sought, an increase of $1,400.

Spitz said Japanese importers gambled last year that the affluent Japanese would pay ever-mounting

Plebiscite defeat end of Rene?

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque says if the Parti Quebecois wins less than 40% support in next spring's referendum "we'd be best off to ... think of something else."

This startlingly frank statement comes in an interview with Levesque published in the French news magazine Le Point.

Asked if he would resign in the face of such a defeat, the PQ leader said he would retain little interest in politics with a poor referendum result. "I will doubtless remain until the next provincial election — which we must hold before November, 1981 — but without much conviction."

In the past, Levesque has usually said the Quebec independence movement could not be stopped.

The interviewer asked Levesque why the referendum question, made public last December, was merely seeking a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association rather than asking Quebecers directly if they support Quebec independence.

Levesque replied: "We could have certainly asked people a question which was sufficiently brutal so that we would be sure to lose. But we're not completely stupid."

He said he would prefer seeing Pierre Trudeau as prime minister.

Olympic boycott pushed

Times News Services

President Jimmy Carter, thwarted in his efforts to have the Summer Olympics moved out of Moscow, Tuesday stepped up efforts for a U.S. boycott of the Games.

An hour after the International Olympic Committee rejected Carter's proposal for a Moscow pull-out because of Soviet intervention in Afghanstian, White House press secretary Jody Powell issued a statement urging the U.S. Olympic committee "to reach a prompt decision against sending teams to the (summer) Games."

The U.S. committee has until May 24, the entry deadline, to reach a decision but the statement made clear the Carter administration's refusal to support sending a team.

"We regret the decision of the IOC to conduct the 1980 Summer Olympic Games in Moscow and to reject a proposal of the U.S. Olympic Committee to transfer, postpone or cancel the Games," the White House statement said.

IOC president Lord Kilannin said the decision to stay in Moscow, made at Lake Placid, N.Y., where the Winter Olympics officially opened today, was unanimous.

Tito worsens

BELGRADE (UPI) — President Jozip Broz Tito's already deteriorated condition has taken a new turn for the worse, an official medical bulletin said today.

"Today the general health condition of President Josip Broz Tito has worsened," the bulletin said.

"The functions of kidneys and the heart have further weakened.

"Intensive medical treatment is being undertaken."

It was the most pessimistic medical bulletin yet on the health of the 87-year-old leader whose original rapid and strong recovery from a leg amputation Jan. 20 suddenly turned around during the weekend.

Voter interest higher now than last May

MONTREAL (CP) — A new Gallup poll, released today, says 82 per cent of the people surveyed indicated they intended to vote in next Monday's federal election.

This compares with 81 per cent before last May's election and 76 per cent in 1974. In each case, the actual turnout was below the poll figure.

In all, 43 per cent of the respondents said they were "very interested" in the campaign — slightly more than last May — and 37 per cent said they were moderately interested.

Another 20 per cent indicated no interest.

Campaigning in Montreal Tuesday, NDP leader Ed Broadbent basked in the glow of an election endorsement from one of Quebec's most powerful French-language newspapers Le Devoir, but conceded his party has little hope of winning any seats in a province that has frozen it out since the party was formed.

Meanwhile, in Dauphin, Man., Prime Minister Clark Tuesday accused Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau of hot telling Canadians "the whole truth about his energy policy."

Trudeau is the "master of the half-answer," Clark told an evening rally attended by about 1,100 supporters as he claimed the Liberals might raise the excise tax on gasoline by up to five cents a litre (20 cents a gallon) to cover the cost of subsidies on imported oil.

In Toronto Tuesday, Trudeau, announcing what was described as an industrial strategy for Canada, said a Liberal government would make sure foreign-owned firms act in Canada's best interest and actively pursue the establishment of a Japanese-style state trading agency to funnel Canadian exports abroad.

Carter moves combat units

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, in a new hands-off signal to the Soviet Union, is ordering an amphibious warfare unit, including 1,800 U.S. marines, to sail next month to waters near the Persian Gulf.

Administration officials, who disclosed the impending move Tuesday night, stressed that it is intended as part of President Carter's measured effort to deter any Soviet designs on control of the oil-rich region.

The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in late December has prompted the Carter administration to intensify military moves designed to safeguard U.S. access to Persian Gulf oil.

A step-up in the U.S. military presence in the Indian Ocean area was already under way as a result of the overthrow of the pro-American shah of Iran a year ago, increased instability in the region and finally, the seizure of the U.S. Embassy and the taking of hostages last November.

However, officials said the latest move was not related in any way to the continued imprisonment of the hostages.

This will be the first time, as far as officials can recall, that a marine combat unit has been sent into the Indian Ocean area.

The officials, asking to remain anonymous, said a reinforced battalion from the 3rd Marine Division arrived Tuesday at the U.S. naval base in Subic Bay, the Philippines, aboard a four-ship amphibious force. They brought with them M-60 tanks, 105-mm artillery, anti-tank missiles and 18 troop-carrying helicopters.

Officials said the marines will carry out exercises in the Philippines for about two weeks and then enter the Indian Ocean for the long sail to the Arabian Sea, joining carrier-led U.S. naval forces that have been covering approaches to the Persian Gulf for several months.

The marines are expected to remain at sea for an indefinite period, with no indications of any U.S. intentions to land them even in manoeuvres.

The Cairo newspaper Al Akhbar reported today a Soviet ship carrying 1,200 Cuban soldiers entered the Suez canal on its way to Marxist-ruled South Yemen at the southern entrance of the Red Sea.

The report said the Leonid Sobinov, a 21,370-ton passenger and general cargo vessel, made its way into Port Said at the northern tip of the canal Tuesday night. The ship started its journey from

Strike protest over murder

ROME (Reuter) — Millions of Italian workers are going on strike to protest the latest murder by Red Brigades terrorists.

Vittorio Bachelet, 53, a leading Italian Magistrate and law professor at Rome University, was shot on the campus Tuesday as he left a debate on the subject of terrorism.

He was shot seven times by a woman aged about 20, who escaped with a bearded youth in a waiting car. The Red Brigades later telephoned to claim responsibility.

The fish don't have a chance

By PAT DUFOUR

The 88-metre Polish fishing vessel Humbak doesn't look much as she sits in the Esquimalt Graving Dock for repairs to her rudder and steering mechanism.

Only nine years old, her hull is weather-worn — harsh evidence that she and her sister ships normally work two years at a stretch before going into port for a paint-up.

But once aboard, the impression changes.

This is truly a workhorse, fitted with all the sophisticated electronics to make fishing the oceans of the world an economic viability.

At the stern of the bridge, overlooking the belly of the ship, are panels of instruments that control the raising of huge nets.

In the bow of the bridge, the electronic gear includes three Polish-made radar sets and three West German and two Polish echo sounders for scanning the ocean bottom.

Humbak is one of seven such vessels of one state-owned company that fish in this part of the world. They have a mother ship that stands by to provide supplies and take their catches.

Her master, Capt. Zanusz Skapski and his crew of 77, were flown from Warsaw in January by the Polish airline LOT to Vancouver to relieve the former crew.

The Humbak makes Vancouver her normal port-of-call for rest-and-recreation visits.

Skapski explains crews spend six months aboard and are then flown back to Poland for three months' leave.

Like the ship, Skapski and his crew are all business on the job. At 46, Skapski has been at sea for 27 years. He had his first command at 25, fishing first in the Baltic Sea, then the North Sea, West Africa and the Antarctic. This is his first visit to these parts.

One of the busiest men aboard Humbak during her stay in dock is chief engineer Stefan Zelobowski. The Humbak has about 900 tons of fileted fish aboard, as well as 120 tons of fishmeal. Because the ship's electrical current is not compatible with that onshore, he has to make sure his refrigeration equipment keeps working.

Skapski and his crew are delighted they have been sent here. They are paid on a percentage basis.

"With good fishing and good weather it's very good for me and the crew," he says.

At sea the deckhands and refrigeration workers work 12-hour shifts, the engineroom hands working in three shifts. Films, television and a library of 600 books help fill their leisure hours.

Skapski says the mother ship keeps them supplied with meat and vegetables. Pork, he says, is the favorite food in Poland, fish coming second.

He says it's rare for a Polish ship to be allowed to have work done in a foreign shipyard because of the high costs. The steering problem, however, had to be corrected.

Zelobowski has no illusions about what's ahead.

"There, it is heavy weather and sometimes hard to go to shelter for ice removal," he says.

The electronics and the men aboard Humbak are ready for the challenge.

No witchunt on teachers —minister

Teacher competence is a concern but B.C. schools are not riddled with incompetence and a witchunt "clearly isn't needed," Education Minister Brian Smith said Tuesday.

The minister was reacting to the Greater Victoria School Board decision to review methods of rating teachers, with a view to weeding out the bad ones.

Smith said the teaching profession watches itself.

"Those few who are incompetent are weeded out of that profession as they are in others.

"I expect there will continue to be full co-operation from the B.C. Teachers Federation in improving standards."

The minister believes it is no coincidence the "hue and cry over teacher competence arises every time there is a drop in school population."

Nevertheless he intends to hold meetings with the deans of education in B.C.'s three universities within the next month, "because I know they are extremely concerned with the question of competence.

"But you have to approach this on a rational, professional basis, not go around looking for victims."

Greater Victoria Teachers Association president Trevor Calkins says teachers do not object to evaluation as long as a positive attitude is taken.

Voting down locally but up in other areas

Voting in the three-day advance poll in the Victoria and Esquimalt-Saanich ridings was down slightly from the turnout for the advance poll last year, but it doesn't appear to be a trend.

In three Vancouver ridings and three ridings up Island, voter turnouts were heavier. Vancouver Centre recorded a much lighter turnout than the year before.

In Esquimalt-Saanich, this year's turnout was 2,192, down from last year's 2,300.

$30,000 loss in fire

A snack of deep-fried potatoes led to a $30,000 house fire in Oak Bay Tuesday night.

Teenaged brothers Tom and Ron Hawker, 3515 Redwood, forgot to remove the pot of cooking oil from the stove when they went out for the evening at 7 p.m.

About an hour later, a neighbor spotted smoke and flames coming out of a vent at the side of the house.

By the time firemen arrived the kitchen was gutted and the blaze had spread into the floor of a bedroom above and the joists over the living room.

The owner of the house, William Hawker, was in Vancouver on holidays.

While firemen were fighting that fire another alarm came in that a pot of fat had ignited in an apartment at Marion Gardens, Fort and Foul Bay.

The fire was extinguished by tenants in the senior citizen complex.

Fire Chief Fred Leeke said Mrs. Charles Adsett suffered burns to her leg removing the pot from the stove. She was treated at Royal Jubilee Hospital and later released.

$2M upgrade

Work will begin next month on a $2 million improvement project at the Departure Bay ferry terminal in Nanaimo, Highways Minister Alex Fraser said Tuesday.

Rent control extension sought by rentalsman

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Alarming rent increases in Vancouver have forced rentalsman Jim Patterson to ask the provincial government to extend rent controls to a large segment of previously unprotected houses and apartments.

Patterson said today the problem is most serious where landlords don't fall under the seven per cent rent ceiling — about 20 per cent of units.

But he said violations are occurring in other areas and his office will start prosecuting landlords who think the rental unit shortage means they can get away with illegal increases.

A spokesman for the Victoria rentalsman office said gouging has not been a problem here — yet.

The other 80 per cent of the market is protected by the limit and can appeal illegal increases to the Rent Review Commission.

The Victoria spokesman said the area suffered a rash of rent increases in the $100 range last October-November as new apartment owners tried to recover high construction costs.

And tenants here are questioning increases much more now than they have in the past, he said.

The Victoria office receives four or five letters a day and a number of phone calls from tenants asking if their rent increases are allowable.

Patterson said the severe shortage of apartments is tempting some landlords to increase rents to unacceptable levels.

"They are in the minority, but even a minority of landlords can cause a lot of problems if they have large holdings," he said.

Those landlords think that if they get caught all they'll be asked to do is roll the rent back.

Violators will be prosecuted under the Summary Convictions Act and are liable to a maximum $500 fine for each month of illegal rent on every unit in the building.

Under the present structure, tenants of exempt units have no protection and in some cases the violation is quite flagrant, he said.

The government must realize the marketplace has changed significantly since the present structure was implemented, Patterson said.

At that time there was a surplus of accommodation.

Flu bug starts its run

It's official: influenza has hit British Columbia and it's a Type B strain similar to the one that has hit epidemic proportions in Washington.

Greater Victoria School Board officials said today absenteeism is up slightly over the average for this time of year, but there is nothing that could be termed alarming.

In a bad news-good news vein, Capital Regional District health officer Dr. A.S. Arneil said he and provincial virologist Dr. Don Kettyls agree there will be only spotty outbreaks of the virus.

"It's always dangerous to predict these things," Arneil said, "but we think it's going to hit in selected areas."

He explained that last year there was both Type A and Type B flu viruses around.

There were only spotty outbreaks of the Type B flu (which hits more people more quickly than Type A but with less severe effects) late last winter and early spring, so there should be many people with some immunity.

Arneil again warned that anyone who gets the flu should go to bed and take liquids.

Cablevision fees up for additional outlets

Company manager Len Charlish said notice of the increase was given but because of the bi-monthly billing system, some subscribers forgot it was coming.

Half the subscribers are billed one month, the remaining half in the following month.

The extra charge applies to subscribers with one or more additional cable outlets and is on top of the basic cable charge of $5.25 per month.

The 50-cent hike means that multiple outlet subscribers now pay $2 per extra outlet.

Charlish said Cablevision's basic fee is the cheapest in the country. The current rate has been in effect since 1976 and he foresees no change until next year.

Additional TV cable outlets are commonplace but Charlish could not say how many residential subscribers actually pay the additional charge.

There are 23,000 multiple outlets in such commercial buildings as hotels, apartments and department stores.

Charlish said when an illegal outlet is discovered by the firm, the subscriber is given the option of disconnecting it, having the charge applied to his bill or going to court.

He said Section 287 of the Criminal Code allows for a penalty of up to two years in jail for theft of telecommunications service.

Trident open house, free flip on Saturday

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Trident Aircraft Ltd. is mounting one last campaign for public support before the federal election by staging an open house at its hangar in Sidney this Saturday.

A flight for two around Victoria and the Gulf Islands is being offered as a door prize for the affair.

The open house, from noon to 5 p.m., is sponsored by former Trident employees and local merchants.

Derek Young, the company's former manager of production control and one of 107 people laid off in January when federal financing was suspended, said Trident wants to try one more time to put across its case to the public.

The open house is also intended to spotlight the job opportunities in the aircraft industry for young people if Trident can get off the ground again with its Trigull amphibious plane.

While Victorians have supported the company, Young said in an interview, many people — even some Trident employees — do not understand the company's requirements and how the aircraft industry works.

"If it's good then why do you need government financing?" they ask, Young said.

"It gets a little upsetting when someone like Don Munro says 'I've immersed myself in it for two days and I know all about it.' People who've been in the aircraft industry for years still don't know what it's all about.

"You can't start an aircraft company like you start a corner store," he said.

A company like Trident requires huge amounts of capital before any aircraft are produced. The manufacturing process is complicated and requires federal inspection at every stage.

Voluminous records must be kept on every part that goes into each plane. Trident has to meet the same quality control standards that apply to companies like Boeing or Canadair which have thousands of employees.

"Manufacturing procedures are so closely controlled and so complex it requires skills available in very few parts of the world."

The crew Trident assembled — still largely intact and waiting for the word to return to work — has more than 1,800 years of combined aircraft manufacturing ex-erience, Young said.

Local young people just coming out of school would be taken on by Trident under apprenticeship programs, which are scarce these days for Victoria high school graduates.

The Trigull is a labor intensive product, "exactly what people talk about when they say we need high technology industries here."

Supporters of the Tory government's decision to cut off $4 million federal funding for Trident forget about the contribution Trident would make in the other direction.

In full production 270 people would be employed, with a payroll estimated conservatively at $5 million a year. Goods and services totalling $3 million a year woyuld be purchased locally, while Canadian subcontractors and suppliers would get a further $5 million in business.

The Canadian and B.C. income tax alone paid by Trident employees would amount to $1.75 million a year.

The company concedes the validity of a report which says several hundred Trigulls would have to be sold before the company turns a profit, but Young said the federal government should take a direct equity position in the Trident, as it did with Canadair and de Havilland, now both successful companies.

Braves in front

Belmont Braves took prompt advantage of opponents' fouls Tuesday night to bounce Mt. Douglas Rams 77-73 and take over sole possession of first place in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' "AA" Basketball League.

Rams enjoyed a 36-27 lead at half time but Ian Lang, one of their most potent scoring threats fouled out in the fourth quarter. Terry Plewes, another key player, did the same and Belmont rallied for the victory.

Darren Alexander set the pace for Totems with 20 points while Ryan Campbell and Will Reid each contributed 16. Ron Crabbe topped Spectrum with 15.

In Greater Victoria High School Boys' "A" League play, Dunsmuir Demons clinched the top south Island berth in the Vancouver Island finals they will play host to next week by tripping Lambrick Park, 90-58. Mark Richards led the Dunsmuir attack with 18 points.

Kelly Hunter dunked 25 points to spark Parkland to a 65-40 decision over Stelly's Stingers in a Greater Victoria High School Girls' League game.

Financial troubles erase cycle opener

GENEVA (Reuter) — The 1980 motorcycle season's opening Grand Prix championship event in San Carlos, Venezuela, has been cancelled for financial reasons, the International Motorcycle Federation (FIM) has announced.

The season was due to start with the San Carlos races for 125-, 250-, 350- and 500-cc categories on March 23, but it will now begin in Salzburg, Austria on April 27.

The Venezuelan Motorcycle Federation contacted FIM headquarters, the sports governing body, to inform them of the cancellation.

A FIM spokesman said no details were given, but it was assumed the Venezuelan federation had failed to attract sufficient sponsorship.

Vikes trim visitors

Billy Loos fired 24 points and hauled down 21 rebounds while leading University of Victoria Vikings to a 92-80 victory over Western Washington State in a collegiate men's exhibition basketball game Tuesday at the McKinnon Gymnasium.

Loos scored 20 of his points during the first half as Vikings, who are now 28-5 overall this season, took a 42-36 lead.

Vikings controlled the boards against Washington State, holding a 54-33 advantage in rebounds while shooting an impressive 51 per cent from the floor.

Ted Anderson added 16 points and Reni Dolcetti contributed 14 for UVic while Kevin Bryant led paced the visitors with 23.

Vikings next play a two-game Canada West University Athletic Association series against Calgary Dinosaurs starting Friday in the Alberta city.

The UVic club has already clinched at least a tie for first place with a 14-0 record and another conference title is practically guaranteed.

UVic Vikettes, who are in a similar position in the women's league with a 16-0 record, need only to win once this weekend against the Calgary Dinnies to wrap up the top berth.
